Japan Will Oblige
Jewish French Premier
England Worries Too Much
Mr. Hughes Takes the Baby

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

Copyright, 1936, by King Features Syndicate, Inc. International copyright and all other rights reserved.

South China thought she wanted a war with Japan, and will probably have it. Troops from Japanese naval squadron land at Amoy, Fukien Province, accompanied by the usual convincing flock of airplanes.

War with Japan is the easiest thing to have, if you really want it.

In Canton, South China's big city, parades and mass-meetings were organized to increase and express hatred of Japan.

The outpouring recalls Voltaire's description of a glass of English beer, "froth at the top, dregs at the bottom."

There came prosperous residents in holiday clothing, mouthing anti-Japanese slogans and threats, shooting off fire-crackers, officials of the city, and provincial rulers, regiments of expert swordsmen, trained to cut off human heads. Ordinary citizens who will have the pleasure of paying for the war came next to last, and last of all, the coolies, "as they walked their backs were bent from pulling heavy wagons as beasts of burden."

If war grows serious efforts will be made to straighten those bent backs, to supply "cannon fodder."

China and the rest of the world must remember that as the population of a nation increases, the new human beings must live somewhere. Last year Japan had her greatest increase in population; more births than deaths by one million twenty-eight thousand; 240 Japanese were born every hour, only 133 died.

Uncle Sam, learning of Japan's expedition against South China, sends the American cruisers Ashville and Tulsa hurrying to Hongkong from Shanghai and Chefoo, respectively. Our cruisers are sent presumably to protect American interests, and it is to be hoped that they will not do more than that, and do it carefully. It would be discouraging to have somebody in Asia say:

"You sent Europeans ten billions when they started fighting, why don't you lend us twenty billions? Asia is bigger."

The French Premier Blum, first Jewish prime minister in French history, is a man of unusual ability, combining common sense with the radicalism of his socialist party. Mr. Birchall writes to the New York Times that there is fear of anti-Semitic outbreaks in France, observers "see a groundswell of an anti-Semitic movement in the vicious attacks of the right against the new Jewish premier." French anti-Semitism, according to Mr. Birchall, has survived the Dreyfus case, which should have ended it.

Some suggest that Premier Blum will be for France what Kerensky was for Russia, a connecting link between the old order and extreme communism, but there is no need, however, to take so gloomy a view in the case of Premier Blum.

It should be remembered that the first Jewish prime minister, Disraeli, had no pleasant time in the beginning; the Commons laughed and hooted him down when he first rose to speak. He took his seat, telling the workers that some day they would listen to him, and they did listen. He made Victoria Empress of India, brought back "peace with honor" from Berlin, incidentally picking up the Island of Cyprus for England at the same time. The French Jewish premier, Blum, who has brains, might do as well for France as Disraeli did for England.

Americans will understand conditions in France better if they keep in mind the fact that there is always in existence there a well organized, well financed party, with a "pretender" ready, trying to bring back monarchy. That increases radicalism.

England worries about France, fears widespread revolt with "fascism," meaning a dictator, not far away.

A dictator might come in France or anywhere else, but in France he would probably not last long. The French had all they wanted in dictators in Charlemagne and Louis the Fourteenth.

A safe prediction is that the French, before they go too far in this upheaval, will realize that France is all they have and decide not to tear it apart.

JAILED, FINED $500 IN JOB 'BRIBERY'

Robert T. Brown and Frederick F. Carroll, both of South Boston, were fined $500 each and sentenced to a year each in the house of correction today in superior court, following their conviction in the alleged schools job selling scandal.

The fines and sentences were imposed by Judge John M. Gibbs after he had denied motions for new trials and stays of execution.

Notification of appeals to Supreme Court were then filed by Attorney William R. Scharton for Carroll and Attorney Francis J. Monahan for Brown.

The sentences and fines today grew out of a jury's conviction of the men on a charge of conspiracy to steal from Miss Mary E. Brennan of Allston, a substitute Boston school teacher.

PREVIOUSLY JAILED

Carroll and Brown were convicted Friday afternoon on one of six joint indictments that had been returned in December and January.

Their indictment and the indictment of James W. Hawkes of Jamaica Plain and John F. Devlin of Charlestown were an outcome of

Downs Race Meet Opens In Rain

Suffolk Downs, June 15—A steady drizzle following the week-end downpour made this racing strip heavy and slow as the crowd started to trickle in this afternoon for the opening program of a 53-day horse race meeting.

With eight races on the card, the fifth event headed the list, the Pilgrim Handicap, a sprint of six furlongs with an excellent field entered. Miss Merriment was the favorite, with A. G. Vanderbilt's Speed to Spare and Spixi the chief threats.

The meeting opening today continues until August 14, and plans for the headlined races call for the appearance here of a majority of the standout horses in the sport.

Bride, Six Others Hurt in Auto Crash

Only a few hours after she became a bride, Mrs. Margaret Doucette, 24, of 27 Clarkson street, Dorchester, was seriously injured today in a headon collision automobile in Brockton.

Her new husband, John Doucette, 32, their best man at the wedding and four others in the wedding party were also injured, but not as seriously.

Others injured in the crash were: Miss Sarah McDonald, 19, of 24 Norwood avenue, Somerville; Frank Reed, 28, of 96 Lagrange street, Roxbury, the best man; Miss Veronica Kearns, 29, of Montreal; Weston Keough, 28, of 28 Olney stret, Dorchester, and Miss Gladys Wright, 30, of Brockton.

The wedding party members were in one of the cars, while Miss Kearns and Miss Wright, not of the wedding group, were in the second machine.

FIRST BONUS BONDS GIVEN N. E. VETS

By THE BONUS EDITOR

Payments began at 7 o'clock this morning.

First New England veteran to step up to Uncle Sam's cash window on the nation's biggest pay day was Percy Staples of 27 Tolman street, Sharon.

He was a regular army hero during the war. Today he is a Works Progress Administration water main extension worker, married, father of three children.

Somebody told him it was a great honor to be the first in New England and asked him what he intended to do with the money. He said:

"Pay my just debts. If I have

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

(Copyright, 1936, by the Boston Evening American.)

James Roosevelt, son of the President, is ready to run for Congress in the 9th District, now represented by Congressman Richard M. Russell of Cambridge.

Word of the younger Roosevelt's ambition is being quietly passed around among a select circle of close friends and certain influential men in the party.

An announcement of his candidacy is not ripe yet. This, it is learned authoritatively by the Boston Evening American, will be preceded by a carefully prepared movement which will take on the appearance of a widespread demand for his services from within the district.

COURT UPHOLDS DOLAN SUIT

Defense motions to dismiss the $250,000 equity action against former City Treasurer Edmund L. Dolan and six others were overruled today.

In the hospital and library cases he instructed both counsel to prepare briefs and submit them for another ruling.

Meanwhile his decision meant that the defendants had lost out on a plea that the City of Boston had no right to sue, inasmuch as the trustees of the various municipal trust funds and the beneficiaries

MASS POISON PROBE TRAIL LEADS TO MAINE

By ARTHUR J. QUINN
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Springfield, June 15 — The body of one of the supposed victims of an insurance murder ring will be exhumed tomorrow on request of Dr. William F. Boos, Harvard Medical School poison expert.

Dr. Boos, it was learned, has found traces of arsenic in organs from this body, which he has had under laboratory analysis, but he has stated he cannot make a definite report without further examination.

District Attorney Thomas F. Moriarty, who announced the coming exhumation, today, said Dr. Boos will be at the grave and will then go with the body to a local mortuary to make an autopsy.

TRACED TO MAINE

Suspects sought for questioning in connection with the investigation have been traced to Lewiston, Me., it was revealed today as an insurance company investigator left hurriedly for that city.

At the same time other investigators and state police were checking information with insurance offices at Concord, N. H., and Hartford, Ct., with the expectation of uncovering more victims of the ring.

NATION EYES 'POLITICAL WEATHERVANE' IN MAINE

FIRST MAJOR TOWNSENDISM TEST IN EAST AWAITED

By LUTHER CONANT, JR

Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Augusta, Me., June 15—An anticipated record-breaking primary vote, over the burning issue of Townsendism in three of the major Republican contests, once again made Maine today the important political weathervane of the nation as the polls opened this morning.

National, as well as state party leaders, anxiously awaited the outcome of what Dr. Townsend himself characterized as the "first major test of Townsendism in the East."

Capacity audiences in Portland and Augusta greeted the National leader of the $200 a month pension plan as he came to the state to support his candidates personally.

The primary-eve thunder bolt was provided with the announcement by Dr. Clinton T. Wunder, leading orator for the Townsend plan, that the organization endorsed Blin W. Page, of Skowhegan, in his contest against Secretary of State Lewis O. Barrows for the Republican gubernatorial nomination.

REFUTED BY LECKEMBY

The endorsement, a complete surprise, was dramatically refuted from the same platform in city hall here, when Rev. J. Clarence Leckemby, the Townsendite congressional candidate for the Republican nomination in the second district, jumped to his feet and declared he was neutral.

"This announcement was made without my knowledge," he said "I was not consulted in the matter of endorsing Page. I myself believe either Page or Barrows would do credit to the ticket."

The effect of this on the whirlwind finish made by Page in his seaplane tour of the state has again aroused excitement in a contest which started as a walkaway for Barrows.

Observers admitted that until the last ballot was counted there was no way of judging the gains made by Page in the closing days of the campaign and by the last minute National Townsendite endorsement.

DISSENSION IN RANKS

Following the Augusta rally, Dr. Townsend admitted that if his candidates were defeated they would be supported if they ran independently.

Asked if that meant the possibility of an entire Townsendite ticket in Maine, the California doctor replied that was a matter which would have to be decided at the organization's own national convention in Cleveland on July 15.

He declined to enlarge on his statement, made following the Portland rally that an independent candidate for the Presidency might be chosen at the convention.

Dr. Wunder drew applause from the crowd when he spoke of a national defense committee now being formed by the Townsendites and referred to the possible need of "bail money" for their national leader.

Both Dr. Wunder and Dr. Townsend made slashing attacks on the "Farley-Roosevelt dictatorship" and appealed for united action against the New Deal.

Declaring he was not interested in "Party Label," Dr. Townsend said that if he could do only one more thing he hoped that his last act would be to "dethrone" the present administration.

The appearance of Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith, former henchman of the late Huey Long, was greeted with mild applause which turned to roaring enthusiasm when he termed the Townsend congressional investigation "a program of inquisition and assassination."

FATHER COUGHLIN APPEAL

Also of national significance was the radio appeal made yesterday by Rev. Charles Coughlin in behalf of the three Social Justice candidates.

The most watched fights today were for the Republican congressional nominations in the first and second districts.

In the first, James C. Oliver of South Portland, combined Townsendite and Social Justice candidate, faced opposition from a badly split field of nine candidates.

In the Democratic primary the vote of Joseph W. Connolly of Portland, Social Justice candidate, may surprise in his race against Cangressman Simon M. Hamlin, of South Portland, and Charles H. Adams of Portland.

In the second district, Rev. Leckemby faces his severest opposition from Major George C. Webber of Auburn, who has overtaken Clyde H. Smith of Skowhegan, in the bid for straight party support. Raymond Rogers of Waterville, is the Social Justice candidate here.

17 months old. The baby has an autographed photograph sent him by President Roosevelt, and his father thinks he ought to go to the convention.

This is probably the first time that a man 96 years old ever took a 17-months-old baby of his own to a Democratic convention.

By the way, had the father fought on the other side of the Mason and Dixon line, his wife, now only 28 years old, if she lived would be entitled to a pension that would run into the year 2004, if she should live to be as old as her husband is now.

When Broadcaster Meets Orator

FR. CHARLES E. COUGHLIN GOVERNOR CURLEY

Father Charles E. Coughlin and Governor Curley hold session of their own following the militant priest's attack on Roosevelt and Landon in Boston speech.

FR. COUGHLIN RESTS HERE

The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin was resting in the Berkshires today after unburdening himself in Boston of the opinion that neither President Roosevelt nor Governor Landon "is worth a plugged nickel."

But that was as far as he would go in expressing his opinion on the current political setup, declaring that he would make his position clear in a broadcast Friday night.

He promised that Friday's broadcast would be important and that a speech he will deliver in New York this week will be "sensational."

Father Coughlin told why he came to the parting of the ways with President Roosevelt.

"He broke his promises," he said. "He did not throw the money-changers out of the temple but, instead, turned over the keys of the temple to them."

Calling their wages "slave pay," he advised Public Works Administration workers "to take the money" but "not vote for the dole."

U. S. NEWSPAPERS HAIL NOMINEE LANDON

Newspapers from one end of the land to the other continue to give enthusiastic endorsement to Governor Landon's nomination for President at the Republican convention.

Independent as well as Republican publications shower editorial encomiums on Landon as "the kind of man the country needs," and "the man for the exacting and arduous task ahead."

The platform adopted by the Republican party is heralded as "a liberal, honest document" on which persons with divergent political views can "stand united to elect Landon." The editorial comment follows:

Cleveland Plain Dealer (Ind-Dem)

The Landon telegram is accepted as an indication of the type of man the Cleveland convention proceeded to nominate immediately after its receipt. It recommends him for the high office toward which he sets his stormy course.

Cleveland Press (Ind.)

And from him in Topeka came a message which stands out as one of the most significent events of the campaign of 1936.

Cleveland News (Rep)

Alfred Mossman Landon . . . reveals again both his liberalism and his courage when he "amends" the platform adopted by the national convention shortly before it conferred on him the leadership of the Grand Old Party.

Landon and Knox . . . form a team which doubtless will astonish the nation with its vigor and its progressiveness. They will lead "the holy crusade for freedom."

Cincinnati Times Star (Rep)

Because Landon thinks straight, because his creed is American and not an exotic something compiled from Asiatic despotism and the Communism and Fascism of Europe, whatever there is of promise in Mr. Roosevelt's multifarious program would have a decent chance to get somewhere.

What is more important, with Landon in the White House the great bulwark of American freedom would be respected and strengthened instead of undermined and reviled.

(Other Landon news on Page 9)

Westbrook Pegler Follows In Footsteps of James Farley

Mr. Farley refers contemptuously to the "typical prairie states"; and in the following article Mr. Pegler, of the Scripps-Howard Newspapers, expresses his contempt for the West in general and Kansas in particular. When Mr. Pegler expresses contempt for the narrow prejudices of the West, he apparently forgets that it was the Democratic party, with representatives mainly from the North and South, which gave the nation prohibition.

(Reprinted from New York World-Telegram June 9, 1936)

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

Cleveland, June 9—There is something about a Kansan—any Kansan—trying to be a devil of a fellow which suggests a Y. M. C. A. man drinking one beer after another and singing a medicated version of "Frankie and Johnnie" in a roadside hamburger stand at half past ten at night to assist in the annual drive for funds.

The tradition, the heredity and the environment of the Kansan are all against conviviality, and he smiles only with a distinct effort of the muscles.

The Kansas strain includes much New England blood, which makes for austerity, and it was no mere figure of speech when Governor Alf Landon was described as the Kansas Coolidge. There is a good deal of Coolidge in the composite Kansas temperament.

It is a dreary spectacle, therefore, when Kansans come to a national political convention to nominate a favorite son for the Presidency of the United States. Political conventions are low and sordid events infested by lobbyists, country lawyers who want to be attorney general or federal prosecutor, broken down journalists who would turn the crank for Pontius Pilate, and a great mass of petty local busybodies eager to be noticed and hoping to attach themselves to the public payroll somehow if they manage to boot their horse home in November. Although the hotel lobbies at convention time do contain many well-meaning enthusiasts who think they are working for their principles and fighting to save the United States from some fearsome thing which they have seen pictured in the cartoons, these people are only the protective coloration of the men who run the show. You can look around the lobbies in Cleveland today and see some of the most loathsome characters that American politics has ever produced. There is the old statesman, for example, who ran with the Ku Klux Klan and the dry dictatorship and never cast an honest vote or entertained a principle in all his life, telling dirty stories to a group of reporters in the shade of the potted palms.

There is the man who circulated handbills showing the President's wife under escort of some Negro military cadets. There is a former United States Senator who was counsel for a celebrated racketeer in a long and successful and, to him, profitable fight to prevent a swindler coming to trial. There are notorious drunken dries of the prohibition era and, of course, a scattering representation of the Ohio Harding gang, not thinning fast enough.

Public and Private Drinking

There is a good deal of drinking in public and private, and the crowds churn around in the spacious lobbies wearing badges and sashes, and it is only fair to say that the majority of the people are ignorant enough to believe that the convention was called to select the best living American to save the country from the perils of the moment.

Amid these conditions the Kansans are conducting the campaign of Governor Alf Landon, a Kansan, which is a description in itself—a dry in his heart, a horny-handed man of wealth, a Coolidge by tempermament and mediocrity's appeal to mediocrity. The Kansans pin artificial sunflowers on the shuffling file of curious Americans who visit their headquarters, and they go to considerable pains to prove that Governor Landon is both a typical Kansan and a good fellow, which is a contradiction of terms.

Kansas wasn't settled by good fellows, and the breed has been consistent to this day.

Kansans Know Their Politics

This is not to suggest that the Kansas politician is innocent of the wiles and tricks of the Wall Street dude or the New Deal Democrat. Payrolls, jobs and commissions are as attractive to him as to anyone in the Roosevelt administration, and Kansas doubtless would show the country something new. He didn't come to Cleveland to save the country, and his motives are generally the same as those of James A. Farley, who could walk through the present assemblage right now waving a sheaf of jobs and walk off with the whole show, leaving the Grand Old Party without a quorum.

Kansans simply haven't the knack. They have been trained to drink in secret and eat cloves or gargle Listerine afterward. At home they still retain the old prohibition practice of ordering near beer and fortifying the same with a strong splash of alcohol or jake. When it came to selecting a campaign song for their man Landon they hit upon Stephen Foster's Negro doggerel, "Oh, Susanna," an incoherent jabber which sounds like clever satire on the whole succession of hill-billy numbers and spirituals which swept the country, per radio, a few years ago. They are appealing to the worst and cheapest in the electorate in competent fashion, like a chaplain trying to be one of the boys when the American Legion bursts into "Hinky Dinky, Parley Voo." They still say "dang" for "damn" and "heck" for "hell."

Landon, of course, if not here, but his old man is on hand, and they are going around saying that the old man is a card. The old man can play poker and bridge according to the Charlie Curtis tradition, and anyone who is thinking of giving Governor Landon's old man a whirl at the cards had better just toss his money in over the transom and walk on by.

But if Landon himself were here and if he were to look over the crowd and say that he respected their intelligence and their motives he would have to be put down for a liar. He is too intelligent for that. He knows what conventions are.

Why Not Say What He Thinks?

I don't know but that this would be a good time for a candidate to come out and tell the electorate what his motives are and what he thinks of them. Landon is a hundred-to-one shot, anyway, and his chances wouldn't be much the worse for a frank expression of the honest belief which every presidential candidate has lied down in his speeches since the republic began. This is Alf Landon's chance to admit that if elected he would immediately start campaigning for reelection and buying his second term with the public money. And though he doubtless would be licked, he could become a historic American rather than just an incidental loser in a bad Republican year by telling the citizens that they are a dumb, emotional, ignorant lot, swayed by slogans, ballyhoo, bands and editorials, who haven't had the intelligence to elect more than three first class Presidents, including Washington.

But he won't. He will order highballs and pour them in the sink when nobody is looking and sit up singing, "Oh, Susanna," to prove that he is just like them in the hope that they will think that they are just like him.

Brighton police were searching today for $75 in dimes, the collection, of years, of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Emery of Linden street, Allston, taken by a thief during their absence.

N. E. COLLEGES AWARD DEGREES

MANY NOTABLES GET HONORS

Thousands of degrees, both honorary and in course, were awarded today at Massachusetts colleges and universities during 1936 commencement exercises.

Leading in interest were the commencement exercises at Wellesley College, where President Ellen Fitz Pendleton, as her last official act before retirement, gave degrees to 308 seniors and 26 graduate students.

Dr. Charles Seymour Provost of Yale delivered the principal address to the graduates, with his topic "The Price of Freedom."

Mrs. Dorothy Thompson Lewis, journalist and wife of Sinclair Lewis, author, and Robert E. Doherty, president-elect of the Carnegie Institute of Technology, were awarded honorary degrees by Tufts College.

The woman journalist received the degree of Doctor of Literature, while Professor Doherty, dean of the Yale Engineering School, won the degree Doctor of Laws.

Banker Honored

Also conferred by Tufts were the degree Honorary Master of Arts on Alpheus Keen, retired banker of Albuquerque, N. M., and the degree Doctor of Divinity upon the Rev. Walter Henry MacPherson, head of the Universalist General Convention.

Other honorary degree recipients included Austin F. Hawes, head of the Connecticut Forestry Department, Master of Science, and John C. Packard, head of the Brookline High School science department, Doctor of Science.

Ten honorary degrees were conferred by Boston University upon distinguished men and women at today's commencement exercises. These were:

Walter A. Jessup of New York, former Iowa State University president, and Mary Kingsbury Simkhovitch, New York social worker, both Doctors of Humanity, and Dr. Alessandro Ghigi and Dr. William Alanson White, Washington psychiatrist, both Doctors of Science.

Dr. Ghigi was the commencement speaker, former Governor Frank G. Allen called the assembly to order in Boston Arena and Mayor Mansfield and Attorney-General Paul A. Dever were among state and city dignitaries on the platform.

1142 Graduate

Seven honorary degrees were awarded at the 115th commencement of Amherst College and a senior class of 110 received degrees of Bachelor of Arts.

New Guffey Act Wins Approval

Washington, June 15 (AP)—The Senate interstate commerce committee today approved a joint Congressional resolution to continue Joseph B. Eastman as co-ordinator of transportation for one year. At the same time it voted to strip the office of regulatory powers.

The measure would re-enact the price-fixing provisions of the original Guffey Coal Control Act, which was invalidated by the Supreme Court. It omits labor provisions of the original statute.

The half-million-dollar maternity marathon being waged in Canada will close on October 31, when the winner will be announced. Charles Vance Millar, the Canadian barrister who died in October, 1926, set aside the rich prize for the Toronto mother who, from October 31, 1926, to October 31, 1936, gave birth to the largest number of children. Above are Mr. and Mrs. Gus Grazino and their eight children. Another child is expected in October. The children, left to right: Sam, 2; Joe, 4; Mamie, 5; Rose, 6; Sara, 8; Mike, 10; Eileen, 13, and little George, 11 months old.

12th Dionne Baby Due September 1

Callander, Ont., June 15 (AP)—A twelfth child is to be born to the parents of the famed Dionne quintuplets, a relative of the family said today.

Mrs. Oliva Dionne will give birth to the baby about September 1, this source declared, and has already consulted physicians about her confinement.

The farm home where the mother, father and their other five children live is now quarantined for measles. Nearby is the hospital where the famous five sisters live. One Dionne child died some time ago.

Toronto Baby Race Nears End

(Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Toronto, Canada, June 15—As the half-million-dollar Charles Vance Millar Baby Race—strangest Maternity Marathon ever known—nears its end, it is still anybody's race. Its outcome will not be known till October 31, when the huge fund provided for in the will of that accentric barrister, who died on October 31, 1926, will fall to the lot of the mother in some modest Toronto home, or be divided equally between two or more of them in case of tie.

As the final date draws near, interest in this novel contest is spreading rapidly, not only throughout Canada but throughout the world. And this interest is destined to remain at white heat until October, for in that month two of the mothers listed as contestants await the arrival of babies. Meantime the stork is expected to visit one of the other marathon mothers in July and two stork visits are due in August.

What'd Quins Do?

So, from the present outlook, it's almost anybody's race. The mother now in the lead, with 10 babies registered since October 31, 1926, has no expectations.

The three who each has nine within the time-limit, have expectations, as have two of the three contenders who now have eight entries.

If either of the two with nine plus expectations should give birth to twins, or of those with eight each, plus expectations, to triplets, the mark set by the present leader will be exceeded. In that case, the entire fortune of half a million dollars may all go to one family. If not, it seems certain the fund will be divided among four or more families.

Study the tabulation in the box accompanying this article, and you will discover all those possibilities. The tabulation ends with a question mark. What a marathon!

The race started nearly ten years ago when Charles Vance Millar, wealthy barrister, sportsman and humorist, made his will and died. His will caused an immediate sensation, and the whole nation laughed at its contents. But one of its clauses put Toronto mothers on their mettle.

Racing Pastors

Millar hadn't any children of his own, so he left the residue of his estate (half a million dollars) to the Toronto mother who from October 31, 1926, to October 31, 1936, gave birth to the largest number of babies; in the event of a tie, the money to be evenly divided.

That wasn't the only peculiarity of the strange will. Millar hated professional moralists and reformers, so to two of Canada's most distinguished reform leaders, Honorable W. E. Raney and Rev. Dr. Samuel D. Chown (both since dead) he left shares in the Ontario Jockey Club, providing each of them became enrolled as shareholders within three years of his death.

Admitting that his will was "uncommon and capricious," he Canadian lawyer, who was a writer of text-books on corporation law, as well as an owner and breeder of race horses, left to each of the duly ordained ministers of Christian churches (excepting one who shot a hotel-keeper) in Walkerville, Sandwich and Windsor, one share of the Kenilworth Jockey Club.

'Mother Clause'

Here was a strange will, indeed. Besides leaving $10,000 to reimburse a business friend who had lost that amount in a business transaction with him, Millar appointed rival trust companies—the National Trust and the Toronto General Trusts, executors, and then appointed one of his own legal partners, Roy Sproatt, as a third executor, so that they would all "quarrel over fees and thus keep the handling of the estate perfectly straight."

Following is the famous "mother clause," just as it appears in the will:

"9. All the rest and residue of my property wheresoever situate, I give, devise and bequeath unto my executors and trustees named below in trust, to convert into money as they deem advisable and invest all the money until the expiration of nine years from my death, and then call in and convert it all into money, and at the expiration of 10 years from my death to give it and its accumulations to the mother who has since my death given birth in Toronto to the greatest number of children as shown by the registrations under the Vital Statistics Act. If one or more mothers have equal highest number of registrations under the said act, to divide the said money and accumulations equally between them."

Seven Toronto mothers who have given birth to an aggregate of 105 children, and who in the past nine and a half years have brought 61 children into the world, are now running neck and neck in this race for half a million dollars.

One mother, Mrs. Alice Timleck, claims to have had 10 children in the allotted time. Another, Mrs. Grace Bagnato, claims to have had nine, with a tenth expected in July.

Mrs. Lily Kenney claims to have had 13 children in the ten-year period, but only nine of them are said to be registered. She expects another on October 14.

Mrs. Hilda Graziano, Mrs. Madeline Harrison and Mrs. Manuela Darrigo have eight each, and all say they will have a total of nine, ten or more children before October.

To get acquainted with the Timleck family and learn what top-score mother will do if she wins, read tomorrow's article in the Boston Evening American.

RIVAL Pointed Out IN COURT

WIFE CALLED RAID 'MEAN'

His wife told him it was a "mean trick to do" when he forced himself into a room and found her with another man, Ralph W. Higgins of Braintree, a railroad employe, testified today in Dedham Probate Court.

Higgins testified he had hired investigators to watch his wife after he had become suspicious of her going with another man. He said his first suspicions were aroused when he discovered she was "running up mileage on his car."

As a result of the investigators' reports, Higgins testified, he went to his house early in the morning on December 1, 1935, and found his wife with the man.

Asked if he could identify the man, Higgins pointed to Pitts, who was seated in the courtroom.

Higgins told the court he found the bedroom door locked and had forced it open. When he put the lights on in the room, Higgins testified, his wife told him:

"Walter, what a mean trick to do. I wouldn't have done this to you."

Today's Boon-Doggle

Among the work relief projects approved for Tucson, Ariz., the Works Progress Administration announces the following:

"Tucson—drain amphitheater; Federal funds, $16,951."

Another project calls for the building of a recreational lake in the vicinity.

It might have been cheaper just to leave the amphitheater as it was and save the cost of the lake; but from a purely pre-election point of view there would, of course, be no profit in that.

BIG BONUS SMILE STRETCHES ACROSS NEW ENGLAND

FRANK J. WALTERS

Pictures from International News Photograph Service

"I can use it," grins World War Veteran Bill O'Leary of Chestnut street, Sharon, as he counts over his bonus bonds, with the grin that tells its own story of the relief and delight which he shares with thousands of ex-service men in Boston and New England. O'Leary was one of the first to receive today's special delivery package from Uncle Sam.

PAUL WHELTON JAMES RAFFERTY

It's the bonus smile! And it's chronic, today, all across New England! Paul Whelton, ace rewrite man of the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser staff, receiving his adjusted service compensation bonds today, doesn't look a bit more pleased than does Mailman James Rafferty, who delivered the long-awaited package. Mail Cashier Harold Patovano of the Boston Evening American makes the necessary identification.

New England Vets Get 100 Millions Tonight

anything left over I'm going to buy myself a package of cigarettes."

FIRST WOMAN HONORED

The official "first payment" to a New England woman was made to Miss Helen M. Logue, of 1167 Boylston street, by Governor Curley in the office of Postmaster Peter F. Tague shortly after 10 a. m.

Miss Logue, who is assistant in charge of the medical unit of the general postoffice, was one of the first women in New England in overseas duty during the war.

She served as a Red Cross nurse with the Harvard Medical Corps unit at Camears, France, attached to the British troops before the United States entered the war, later transferring to the American army.

Miss Logue received $1026 for one year and nine months of service with the A. E. F. Her service with the British totaled nine months.

"I will use the bonds as I need them," she said. "Perhaps the first use I will make of them will be for my vacation."

So began the distribution of approximately $100,000,000 to 183,753 New England veterans of the World War who have already adjusted their bonus claims with the treasury department and will receive this tremendous sum before 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Throughout the nation the government began placing 28,094,875 of the $50 bonds in the hands of 3,000,000 veterans.

Every precaution was being taken in the manner of distribution and in advice to the receivers of the bonus to protect them from fraud, get-rich-quickers and wasteful spending.

Circulation of the bonus funds was expected to be reflected in increased retail sales before the week-end.

Conversion of bonds to cash will begin in most places tomorrow and checks for immediate cashing by the veterans who convert their bonds will be in the mails Wednesday and Thursday.

Although the first major distribution of the bonus will not start until 5:30 tonight when letter carriers start out from the postoffice with registered envelopes for 43,876 veterans in the Boston postal district, many of the bonds actually were distributed during the morning and afternoon.

DOWNTOWN DELIVERIES

In Boston, deliveries of the registered bonus envelopes were made to 1700 veterans of the police and fire departments and others who gave downtown business addresses.

Police officials receiving bonus bonds included Acting Superintendent Fallon, Captains Eldridge, Wall, Donovan, Daly, Sheehan, Kananagh, Duggan, Murphy, Cacey and O'Connor and 16 lieutenants. About 1200 members of the force which numbers 1800 men, are eligible for the bonus.

Bonus payments for 34 convicts at state prison were delivered to Warden Lanagan at 10 a. m. by John Clark, superintendent of the Charlestown postal district. The amounts ranged from $400 to $1500.

Morning and afternoon distribution also was made in towns like Sharon, which has no mail delivery service, and Norwood, where night deliveries were not warranted. There the veterans were invited to call at the postoffice during the day, identify themselves and obtain their bonds.

Bonus letters clearing through the Boston postoffice for New England numbered exactly 183,757. These included 156,868 received from the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, 4039 received from reserve banks in other districts, and 22,850 from Washington.

For their distribution, 2355 pouches and 12,750 registered mail jackets were used.

COLLECTED BY CLERKS

Those destined for outside the Boston postal area were collected by the railway mail clerks at midnight and taken in armored trucks to the trains.

Applications filed through the veterans bureau in Boston resulted in registered letters clearing through here for nearly every spot on the globe: India, Poland, France, Jamaica, Belgium, Denmark, Sweden, Lithuania and Cayman Island.

Between 5 and 6 p. m. 100 registered bonus letters will be delivered to YD headquarters at 200 Huntington avenue.

At 6 p. m. nearly 200 of the letters will be delivered to the Soldiers' Home in Chelsea.

WAIT RAINY DAYS

Among the first bonus deliveries in downtown Boston were those to two members of the Boston American editorial staff, Paul Whelton, veteran of the army air service, and Fred Perkins, veteran of the American field service and the 77th field artillery, 4th division.

Both said they would put their bonds away for a rainy day and anxiously consulted the weather forecast.

One of the first Federal building deliveries was to Max Roder, of Strathmore road, Brighton, attached to the Federal narcotic bureau, who was born in Germany, served abroad in the American army intelligence and brought back to this country as his bride a German girl who served in the German army intelligence.

Staples, the Sharon veteran first in line, saw service with the regular army at Evacuation Hospital, 11, Froidois, from February, 1918, to July, 1919. He formerly lived in Audubon road, Back Bay, and his wife, whom he married soon after returning to the United States, was Lena Hansen of Aldie street, Allston. Their children are Lillian, 10; Louise, 6, and Pauline, 8 months.

OTHERS GET EARLY PAY

He received his bonds from Olin Cleveland, assistant to Postmaster W. F. Ring of Sharon.

Other early Sharon payments were made to William O'Leary of Chestnut street and Clifford E. Parker of Pond street, both Sharon residents.

Nearly all of Sharon's 150 veterans collected early. Payments were underway to 500 in Norwood.

Sharon's certifying unit will also see early service. While most other units will not open until 9 o'clock tomorrow morning, the unit at the Sharon postoffice will be open between 7 and 11 o'clock tonight to enable Sharon veterans wishing to do so to convert their bonds into cash.

Knights of Columbus assembly hall, located in Memorial Hall square, Dedham, will house Dedham's certifying unit, with eight certifying clerks in attendance. It will be open from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. tomorrow.

Bonus delivery will commence at 6 p. m. today, according to Postmaster J. R. Delaney, was estimates that in the neighborhood of 600 veterans will receive bonuses in Dedham.

In addition to the regular certifying unit, Postmaster Delaney announced that the three windows at the postoffice will remain open until 9 p. m. on the holiday for the convenience of veterans.

Postal carriers are to be given the fullest co-operation and protection, as the result of instructions by Acting Superintendent Edward W. Fallon to police captains.

Postoffice phones were so clogged with incoming calls from veterans seeking information that few calls to outside were possible.

WIVES SEEK CONTACTS

Deserted wives seeking contact with their husbands through the Veterans' Bureau record of applications number only about 30, officials said. This information cannot be given them, but in cases where warrants or indictments have been obtained, the information is available to prosecuting officers, for the most part probation officers.

Some veterans notified the postoffice they could not possibly be at home to receive their bonus from the letter carriers.

These were advised that the letter carrier would leave a card to be filled out for a change of delivery address or that they could call for their bonds at the postoffice where delivery would be made after identification.

Some wives whose veteran husbands have disappeared made inquiry as to their status and were informed they were entitled to apply for their husband's bonus providing he has been missing seven years.

Paul Edwards, Works Progress Administrator, said that no veteran would be dropped from WPA rolls because he received his bonus.

'Vets' Thankful

Massachusetts' veterans can give thanks to the Boston Evening American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser for tonight's bonus payment and all the gladness and security it involves, in the opinion of Henry V. O'Day, adjutant of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

"We owe," said Mr. O'Day today, "a great debt of gratitude to the Boston Evening American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser for the splendid fight they put up in our behalf for the soldiers' bonus.

"From the beginning, Mr. Hearst's Sunday and afternoon newspapers here united to exert every effort toward getting the federal government to pay its debt to its defenders.

"The victory belongs to them, and when I say this I am speaking for every member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars."

$50,000 FIGHT BID TO GABLE

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor, Universal Service

Hollywood, June 15—Clark Gable, who made front page copy when he knocked out Allen Pomeroy, former inter-collegiate boxing champion, during the filming of a picture has had a bona fide offer of $50,000 to fight Max Baer.

The offer, brought to the screen star by Tom Gallery, local fight promoter, specified that the fight could take place any time, any place, at Gable's discretion.

The actor said that naturally he would not be willing to fight the former champion without sufficient training and, that he would have to get a leave of absence from his studio before he could fight, or before he could even consider such an offer.

at least 300 policy holders in Ludlow.

At Hartford are situated the central offices of insurances companies with several hundred policyholders in Ludlow, Chicopee, Indian Orchard and Wilbraham, and an exhaustive check of these, and on deaths dating back a dozen years, will be made.

Three men wanted for questioning are said to have been seen in and around Lewiston, Me.

Discovering their lives have been insured, in some cases for very large amounts without their knowledge, several persons in this vicinity have appealed for protection to the investigators.

These persons have also applied for cancellation of the policies, believing that is the only way of guaranteeing themselves against poison or violence.

An insurance company investigator engaged in the probe here, who would not allow his name to be used, made known the details of several of these cases and vouched for their accuracy.

TALKS FREELY

In one instance, he said, a man sought insurance and was amazed to learn that his application was refused on the ground he was already "overloaded." He told investigators he was unaware previously that any policy was in force on his life.

He talked freely on the matter after the application was refused and was advised by unnamed persons to "forget" about it.

In another case, the investigator revealed, a woman sought to insure her husband's life and was informed that he was already insured for $7500, double indemnity. Neither she nor her husband had been aware of the policy, she said.

In still another instance, a man was rejected when the physical examination disclosed a bad heart condition. It was later discovered that his life had been insured for $5000, although he had no knowledge of it.

$750,000 CANCELLATION

It was possible, the investigator revealed, that these persons would be taken care of by the proposed widespread cancellation of insurance policies now in force in this area.

He said that, at a conservative estimate, the cancellation which was being considered, would involve policies aggregating at least $750,000.

During their visits to Concord and Hartford the state detectives are also planning a careful checkup on policies on 22 persons, who have died during the past 12 years.

SEVENTEEN PAID OFF

Of this group, beneficiaries on 17 policies were paid off when the insured person died. Four other persons were never paid off and in the remaining one, it was revealed that no claim for the insurance was ever made, the investigation disclosed.

The insured in this case was found in a badly frozen condition and removed to a hospital where he died 24 hours later. His policy was for $6000 and carried a double indemnity clause

The beneficiary named in the policy was unrelated to the insured and no claim was ever made for the insurance it was learned.

While state detectives asserted there was no information forthcoming at the present time on their investigation, it was learned reliably from a source close to the probe that a "break" in connection with one of the three deaths now under scrutiny was expected within a few rours.

It was also learned today that, while concentrating on the three recent deaths in connection with the insurance murder ring, authorities were interested in the death last week of another man in a town near Springfield.

The man in question, said to be insured for a large amount, died last Wednesday before the probe became public, and was buried Saturday.

Death of an Easthampton man within the past three weeks also has attracted the attention of investigators.

TOWN RECORDS CHECKED

In addition to the police probe, crack insurance company investigators are continuing their work in connection with the revelations of apparent operations of a murder ring in this area.

Activities of several doctors, lawyers and insurance agents have come under their scrutiny, it was learned, and the operations of at least two undertakers are also being subjected to detailed examination.

500 Hunt Baby Carriage Firebug

New York, June 15 (AP)—Fire and police experts struggled today to built a trap for the "baby carriage" firebug whose week-end depredations have held apartment and tenement dwellers in a two-month reign of terror.

While 500 sharp-eyed detectives and plainclothesmen loitered in all sections of his Bronx and Harlem stamping grounds, the pyromaniac—already credited with about 25 fires and one death—carried his torch into the Washington Heights section.

Typical of the method used in the other week-end fires, he started a blaze in an unoccupied perambulator under the stairs on the ground floor of a West 179th street apartment building. The fire was extinguished without damage.

Taxing Workers' Pay

Social Security Act Labor Blow

This is the first of a series of articles analyzing the provisions of the Social Security Act and showing what it will eventually do to workers' pay.

By R. P. ELLIS
Industrial Economist

The Social Security Act sets up a new principle in taxation, namely a tax on payrolls. It taxes all industrial and commercial wage earners for the benefit of certain classes named in the act.

This act was heralded as a great piece of legislation.

Its aims are commendable; but its methods of raising and handling the necessary funds is vicious. We say this advisedly—vicious. It is vicious because it will not only tax all workers' meagre pay envelopes for the benefit of others, but it is vicious in that it is a misleading method of taking money away from wage earners and their employers.

Ask any man in industry, or in an office, what a pension plan is and he will tell you it is an ASSURANCE of a guaranteed yearly payment when he reaches a certain age, like 65.

Pensions and annuities should be based upon insurance ("actuarial") principles.

Tax Payrolls

While people generally may not know the actual mechanics of handling insurance and pension funds, they do know that the methods enforced by law upon insurance companies make the funds safe, that is, ASSURE the insured that the protection he pays for will be there when it falls due.

For this reason the mere use of the word "pension" carries with it an implication of security.

What the Social Security Act sets up is far from being a pension system. The word "security" as applied to the act is a misnomer.

As far as the workers go, especially those under 50 years of age, this act is nothing more than a tax on payrolls.

Instead of proper "reserves" being set up for the benefit of each person taxed, the funds raised from taxing all employed persons from 16 to 65 years of age will not only be dipped into to pay the first claims that become due; they can be used for general government expenses, the way the act is drawn.

The writer wishes to make perfectly clear, at the outset of this analysis of the Social Security Act, that he has no quarrel with the beneficent AIMS of the program. The point that will be stressed is that WORKERS' PAY SHOULD NOT BE THE SOURCE OF THE FUNDS TO PAY FOR IT.

Some of the press dispatches, at the time the bill was being passed, carried the statement that a fund of fifty billion dollars ($50,000,000,000) would be on hand by 1980, and some anxiety was expressed as to the influence of such a fund upon investment markets.

People are apt to say, "why worry about 1980!" Correct, for the reason that no such fund will be on hand from the taxes levied by this act.

The funds will all be dissipated, and before 1980 we will have pensions and benefits, provided for in this act, being paid out in the neighborhood of nine or ten billion dollars ($10,000,000,000) annually with receipts from the taxes the act levies running around two billion dollars ($2,000,000,000).

Face Tax Boost

One does not have to be an actuarial expert to figure that it will take a tax of over 20 per cent of payrolls ultimately to meet the payments to the beneficiaries under this act.

Experts figure payrolls at $27,500,000,000 for the present, rising to $35,000,000,000 in later years.

When you look at the taxes imposed under the act they seem small. It is unfair to the workers of the country to mislead them into a false sense of security and let them believe they will be taken care of out of the meagre amount levied. It simply cannot be done. Either the payroll taxes will have to be raised tremendously, or the benefits will not be paid. Then where will the worker be?

The Social Security Act does not square with what is promised.

Fog Ties Up Big Vessels In Harbor

Passenger and freight vessels bound for Boston today were halted by fog in the lower harbor, Buzzards Bay and Nantucket and Vineyard Sounds.

Several ships, including the New York boat and the liner Berkshire, with 150 Philadelphia police and firemen and their friends aboard, picked their way through the fog blanket to their piers.

The American Merchant from London with 46 passengers on board was waiting at quarantine for the fog to lift, and the freighter Waukegan from Norfolk was waiting for a short distance away.

At Deer Island light the observation was scarcely 50 yards. The crew at Highland Light on Cape Cod reported no visibility at all.

Around Cape Cod canal the fog was very thick. The freighter El Oceano from Houston and Galveston, and the Merchants and Miners passenger and freight liner, Fairfax, were anchored near Wing's Neck, at the Buzzards Bay entrance to the canal.

The Scantic from New Orleans was anchored off New Bedford and several colliers were halted in Nantucket and Vineyard Sounds.

The Agwidale from Jacksonville and other southern ports docked at Lewis wharf. The United Fruit ship Darien from Tela, Honduras, was making slow headway and was expected to dock.

During the night and early morning 56 fishing vessels came into port, including 16 steam trawlers, five schooners, nine mackerel seiners and 26 small boats. These landed 2,000,000 pounds of fish at the fish pier.

The fog hazard will continue until tomorrow, along the New England shore, according to the weather forecaster.

Boston had a rainfall of 1.4 inches in the 24-hour period ending at 10 a. m. today. This is the largest in 24 hours since March 12 and was of great benefit to dry farmland.

ASK BLACKLIST OF COAL FIRMS

Establishment of a "black list" of coal contractors found to be defrauding the city was recommended today by the Finance Commission in a communication to the city council.

The Finance Commission also recommended that the city employ a new fuel engineer, with specific aim to halt frauds alleged to have been perpetrated by coal companies and avoid future hardship to city employes and welfare recipients.

In its communication, the Finance Commission criticized specifically the Standard Coal Company, Goldie Kline president and Max Kline treasurer, payment to which was ordered held up by the Finance Commission on the allegation that an inferior grade of coal was supplied on a city contract.

Today's recommendations by the commission grow out of the recent hearings on coal contracts and deliveries before the finance board.

Everest Climbers Back at Base Camp

Darjeeling, India, June 15 (AP)—Hugh Ruttledge's British mountain-climbing expedition gave up today, at least temporarily, an attempt to reach the summit of Mt. Everest.

The hardy climbers fell back to their base camp as perilous weather continued to sweep over the 29,002-foot giant.

POPE BESTOWS RED HAT ON 2 OLD FRIENDS

Vatican City, June 15 (AP)—Pope Pius XI raised two old friends to the princely rank of cardinal today behind the guarded doors of a secret consistory.

The two new princes of the church are Monsignors Giovanni Mercati and Eugenio Tisserant, "bookworm" friends of the Holy Father.

The Pope, in an allocution delivered to the assembled cardinals, invited the Catholic faithful throughout the world to pray the remainder of his life might be spent in unceasing fruitful work.

He congratulated Catholic action organizations on their activities among laymen, and said:

"These signs, which in the midst of many adversities indicate divine assistance in the face of an increase in the church's enemies, are increasingly generous with their aid, their comforts and their proofs of fidelity."

In his invitation to the faithful, the Pope said:

"We invite the Catholic faithful to pray the Lord will permit us as long as life lasts to spend it in unceasing, fruitful work for the divine glory and good of the soul."

During the consistory the Pope formally proclaimed appointments of three American and two Canadian bishops. They were Monsignor George L. Leech, bishop of Harrisburgh, Pa.; Monsignor Hugh L. Lamb, auxiliary bishop to Cardinal Dougherty; Monsignor William Adrian, Nashville, Tenn.; Monsignor Francis Carrol, Calgary, Alta., and Monsignor Patrick Bray, St. John.

Sharon Vet First to Get Bonus; Prison Warden and Convicts Collect, Too

Warden Frank Lanagan of the Charlestown State Prison, at right, is receiving a bundle of bonus envelopes, one of which is addressed to himself and the other 34 to men now serving sentence in that prison. The deliverer is John F. Clarke, superintendent of the Charlestown postoffice.

It's been a long, long wait, but here's World War Veteran Percy Staples of Tolman street, Sharon, with the bonus bonds which the mailman brought him at 7 o'clock this morning. Postoffice officials believe Staples may have been the first New Englander to step, figuratively speaking, up to the cash window as Uncle Sam paid off the obligation incurred so many years ago.

FRANCE FACES NEW STRIKE ON LIVING COST

Paris, June 15 (AP)—Prospects of living cost increases brought warnings of a new French strike today.

Workers, returning to their jobs assured of more pay and shorter hours, may ask additional wages if prices of necessaries go "too high," labor officials asserted.

A new walkout might be called, they declared, regardless of the fact higher costs of food and other commodities could be traced directly to the fattened pay envelopes and 40-hour work week demanded by and voted to the strikers.

The plants may soon become the property of the employes, asserted Communist leader Maurice Thorez, in a "bloodless revolution" celebration at Lille.

The strkers did not damage the plants "because they knew they would soon become their property," Thorez said.

Marseille held the spotlight as the chief center of strike activities. Cafes, restaurants and theaters were closed.

Still to be arbitrated were walkouts of department store clerks, insurance company workers and dressmakers in Paris.

the sweeping probe of charges that school positions were being "bought."

Devlin turned state's evidence and Hawkes was sent to jail for a year on charges of having attempted to procure money from a music teacher to get him an appointment in the Boston school system.

The "expose" which resulted in all this came when a meeting of substitute teachers was called, last fall, and at it, certain girls testified, the subject of raising a "slush fund" for school committeemen was discussed.

She testified that she had called the meeting at the instance of Carroll and Brown, but that she had no intention of collecting the contributions they solicited.

They asked her, she said, for $50 each from nine girls to "put the school committee in good humor" so that the eligible teachers' list would be "frozen."

They asked that when the substitute teachers were appointed to permanent positions contributions of $100 each be then made, Miss Brennan said.

She testified that Carroll and Brown claimed to represent Dr. Charles E. Mackey, former school committee chairman. Dr. Mackey and both defendants made flat and detailed denials of the charges.

At a bench conference, both counsel requested that the sentences be served in Charles street jail, rather than on Deer Island and this request was granted.

125,000 Quit Coal Mines

Death House Inmates Get Bonus

Ossining, N. Y., June 15 (INS)—Two men to whom the bonus meant least in New York state today were Everett Appelgate and Thomas McFarland.

Address: Sing Sing death house.

Each receives bonus of about $500, delivered to Warden Lawes. Appelgate poisoned his wife, Ada. He and Mrs. Frances Creighton must die the week of July 13 for her death.

Tieup in Tunnel Traps Thousands

Thousands of persons on the way to work were penned in trains and trolleys today when power failed on the Boston Elevated, stalling the entire system for about eight minutes.

In some sections, particularly near Maverick square, East Boston, near-panic ensued when tunnel transportation halted and lights were extinguished.

Police reported that, despite the pleas of operators, about 300 persons climbed out of rapid transit trolleys in East Boston and walked through the tunnel to Maverick square.

The same confusion existed in the Maverick-Devonshire tunnel trains and only for the cool heads of some of the passengers and the strenuous efforts of guards injuries would have followed, police said.

All westbound trains in the Cambridge-Ashmont tunnel were stalled from 7:18 to 7:24 thereof, were the ones to complain.

The City of Boston action seeks to recover $250,000 alleged to have been gained by the defendants by improper bond transactions during the regime of Dolan as city treasurer, from 1930 to 1933.

Immediately after the ruling, Special Counsel George R. Farnum began reading into the records depositions of certain New York brokerage houses, allegedly relating to bond business with the Legal Securities Corporation during 1930-33.

This Legal Securities Corporation, according to the City of Boston case, was supposed to be a "dummy" company, controlled by Dolan, through which the former treasurer bought bonds.

Most of the day had been taken up with Corporation Counsel Henry E. Foley reading wills which set up municipal trust funds. His purpose was to show that the city was intended to receive the moneys and the city treasurer intended to invest them.

Merit System Measure Backed

Washington, June 15 (INS)—The merit system issue, which is expected to figure prominently in the presidential campaign, was tossed into the congressional hopper today to add to the burden of measures blocking adjournment.

Democrats moved swiftly to counter the Republican platform plank, adopted at Cleveland, which called for restoration, improvement and extension of the merit system in civil service and charged it has been "virtually destroyed by New Deal spoilsmen."

Backed, he said, by White House approval, Representative Ramspeck (D.), of Georgia, chairman of the House civil service committee, introduced a measure in the House to extend the civil service system to all executive departments by presidential order.

DIPLOMAS TO 3 IN BED

Girls Graduate Despite Illness

Three 14-year-old girls, ill during the past year with rheumatic fever at the House of the Good Samaritan in Binney stret, Roxbury, received today, along with thousands of other girls in the city their own age, their junoir high school diplomas.

The three girls are Alice Battite of Roxbury, who entered last December; Anna Cohen of Chelsea, who went to the hospital in April, and Emily Christodoro of Mattapan, admitted in May.

With more than 100 other boys and girls, the three continued their schooling under instruction by the public school department.

At formal exercises today the three girls were awarded diplomas by Edward J. Muldoon, assistant superintendent of schools.

The girls wore for the occasion pink hair-ribbons and knitted jackets. They sat in their beds which had been moved away from the ward, and faced an audience of hospital authorities, their parents and those of their hospital mates who were well enough to be out of bed.

Presiding at the exercises was Mrs. Florence W. Sands, high school instructor at the hospital. Others in attendance included Miss Louise M. Coleman, hospital superintendent; Dr. Benedict Massell, resident physician; Mrs. Grace R. Corrigan, who has taught the grammar school grade since the hospital school was started 14 years ago; Mary H. Stroup, supervisor of physically handicapped children for the Boston school department; Miriam Sullivan, instructor, and Mrs. Sarah L. Still, assistant superintendent of the hospital.

Jacksonville, Fla., June 15 (AP)—Coast Guard divisional headquarters announced today that wreckage of the Coast Guard amphibian plane 168, missing on storm patrol duty, had been located in Tampa Bay. The crew of three men was believed lost.

The Coast Guard craft Nemenis, one of the boats sent to search for the plane, reported the wreckage was sighted by plane at 9:20 a. m. (E.S.T.)

The plane was piloted by Lieut. C. M. Perrott. His crew consisted of chief radioman Acting Walter O. Morris and aviation mechanic, first class, William D. Eubanks.

Ft. Myers, Fla., June 15 (AP)—Residents of many south Florida cities were marooned by high waters today resulting from a tropical storm which crossed the state and went out the Atlantic Ocean.

There was heavy rainfall through the night, but no material wind damage was reported.

Sheriff Bob King said he was informed by residents of Bonita Springs, 20 miles south of here, that the waters there were the highest they had been in about 10 years—approximately 2½ feet.

Fred A. Flanders, government weather observer at Moore Haven, reported rainfall in the 48-hour period prior to 8 a. m., today was 9.33 inches, the heaviest since the 1926 hurricane, when it was estimated between 12 and 15 inches fell.

The center of the slight tropical disturbance was very near Miami at 8:30 a. m. when the barometer read 29.59

1-Day Bride Is Divorced

Salem, June 15—Giving up his fight to keep the bride who left him on their wedding day, more than five years ago, Ernest E. Cushing, 37, of Bond street, Lynn, today obtained a divorce from the former Rose Weiner.

The decree was granted by Judge Edward B. O'Brien.

Cushing charged desertion, and the suit was uncontested. He said his wife lives in Chambers street, Boston.

"We were married at 5 o'clock in the afternoon and had a reception that night, and at 11 o'clock she went home to tell her parents about the marriage," said Cushing.

"She didn't return, and the next day her father said I would never see Rose again.

"I have only seen her twice, both times in court, when she sued for annulment and when she sued for divorce."

Rose Weiner Cushing lost both of her suits. In the annulment suit she told a sensational story of having been "doped" with a drink and she said she married under the name of Rose Budge and falsified her age. The court disbelieved her "dope" story.

Cushing met Rose Weiner while chopping wood for her father, when she was only 16 years old, and the marriage followed a rapid courtship. Cushing is a war veteran.

Story of the New Super-Film 'Hearts Divided' in Pictures

1—Napoleon Bonaparte (Claude Rains), needing funds to fight England and knowing he cannot defend Louisana from Great Britain when he goes to war, sends his brother, Jerome (Dick Powell), to the United States to negotiate for the sale of the territory.

2—News of Jerome's coming spreads swiftly through the states, and in Baltimore the potent political factor, Charles Patterson (Henry Stephenson), tells his charming daughter, Betsy (Marion Davies), that it will be their good fortune to have Napoleon's brother as their guest for a time. One event planned in honor of the visitor is a horse race at which Jerome and his aides are to share a box with the Pattersons.

3—In Washington, Jerome is bored by the continual round of social functions in his honor. He decides to escape temporarily by hiding his identity. This he does despite the insistence of his two aides, Du Fresne (Walter Kingsford) and Pichon (Etienne Girardot), that he attend the race. He slips away and adopts the name of "Monsieur Giraud," a humble citizen of France.

4—By chance, Jerome goes to Whetstone Track, near Baltimore, where he was to have been the honored guest. He meets Betsy Patterson. They converse and he suggests a wager. "If your horse wins," he proposes, "I shall be your groom for a week. If my horse wins, you shall show me the countryside." (Continued in tomorrow's American.)

This is the first of six chapters telling with pictures the story of "Hearts Divided," the Warner Bros.-Cosmopolitan Production starring Marion Davies and with a cast including Dick Powell and Claude Rains which comes to the Metropolitan Theater, beginning Friday, June 19.

LANDON TO STRIKE FIRST IN EAST

EAGER TO OPEN CAMPAIGN

By ARTHUR HACHTEN
Universal Service

Topeka, Kas., June 15—Governor Alfred M. Landon in his campaign tour for the presidency, will strike first in the East with speeches including one in New York City, before taking a swing around the West, it was learned here.

He is eager to begin campaigning as soon as details can be arranged and intends to push the drive to oust the "New Deal" from Washington into high gear long before the usua. practice of waiting until the last 30 or 60 days.

The "fight is already on," Landon pointed out. Assuming the leadership in what he is convinced is the greatest struggle for retaining a constitutional government since the birth of the Republican party, the nominee today was to confer here with John D. M. Hamilton, Republican national chairman.

This will be followed by a meeting tomorrow with Colonel Frank Knox, Republican vice presidential nominee, and a sub-committee of the Republican National Committee.

SPURNS "FRONT PORCH"

Information that the Governor will strike aggressively into eastern territory at the outset of his campaign disclosed that the Republican high command does not contemplate a "front porch" affair. Landon's itinerary will include the east, west and central portions of the country, it was indicated.

Since he has leased a ranch near Estes Park, Colo., for his family, the expectation was the Governor would accompany Mrs. Landon to the ranch around June 25, to remain there a few days or during the Democratic National Convention, which begins June 23, at Philadelphia.

But the organization work in the Republican party will go on with added steam during the next few days. Already the "prairie states" are on fire with oratory in Republican rallies.

ON ALL FRONTS

With the return home of delegates to the Republican National Convention, the campaign will be pressed on all fronts. With the opening of headquarters in Chicago and New York this week, the Speakers' Bureau will be set up and swing into action, lining up big guns in the party for speaking tours.

Former President Hoover undoubtedly will make a series of speeches. Senator Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan, and Senator Frederick Steiwer or Oregon, will be slated for speaking tours along with other senators, representative Republican governors and thousand of lesser lights in the party across the nation.

That Knox will make two or three swings around the country was a foregone conclusion. With Landon the Colonel will go into conference on the line of attack to be made.

T. J. Fitzgeralds Wedded 25 Years

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Fitzgerald celebrated their silver wedding anniversary in their home, 8 Brinsley street, Dorchester, yesterday, where they "received" 100 relatives and friends.

The couple, who were married on June 14, 1911, by the late Rev. Robert Johnson in the Gate of Heaven Church, South Boston, have been residents of Dorchester for a quarter of a century. Mrs. William J. Shea of West Somerville, sister of Mrs. Fitzgerald, who was bridesmaid at the wedding, was present.

Mr. Fitzgerald is a native of Charlestown and a member of Bunker Hill Council, Knights of Columbus, and a past chief ranger of Edward Everett Court, M. C. O. F. Mrs. Fitzgerald was Miss Mary Regan of South Boston. The two sons of Mr. and Mrs. Fitzgerald, Thomas J., Jr., and William F. Fitzgerald, assisted in receiving the guests.

Harvard to Unveil Old Wooden Pump

A replica of Harvard's old wooden pump, blown to atoms in 1901, and object of a thwarted attempt to bomb it last week, is scheduled to be unveiled tomorrow in a ceremony in Harvard Yard.

The Hollis pump will be officially declared in use by Jerome D. Greene, tercentenary director, and the first drinks go to Dr. J. Dellinger Barney, of Boston, and Dr. Samuel Eliot Morison, history professor, who were leaders of the movement to restore the pump.

LANDON, FULLER BOOM SOUGHT

Attempt to get Governor Alfred M. Landon, of Kansas, Presidential nominee, to endorse former Governor Alvan T. Fuller for the Republican nomination for Governor of Massachusetts is being made, it became known today.

James A. Symonds, well known in banking circles, asked Edwin F. Parker, president of the Landon-for-President Club of Massachusetts, to use his influence to that end.

Symonds said that with Fuller running again, Massachusetts could be confidently expected to be regained by the G. O. P. in the November election.

Parker expressed sympathy, but said his organization's sole purpose was to bring about the election of Governor Landon as president.

Parker said he believed the presidential nominee would not interfere in local contests.

SMITH SEEKING ELY AID

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
(Copyright, 1936, by International News Service)

New York, June 15 (INS)—Al Smith will not go to the Democratic national convention in Philadelphia netx week unless other prominent anti-New Deal Demoertas indictae they will be there to support him, International News Service was informed on the best of authority today.

The former governor has decided he will not go to Philadelphia as a "lone wolf.'

FACES "RAZZBERRY"

Smith has come to he conclusion that the Jim Farley political machine is "too well-oiled" for him to buck it alone. And no one understands political workings better than Smith.

He has been advised by Philadelphians who are friendly to him that the local Philadelphia New Deal organizers are preparing to give him the "Razzberry" in the event he appears on the convention floor as an opponent to the policies of President Roosevelt.

Al, who loves a fight as well as anyone and a man who wouldn't shrink from one if the odds were anywhere even, does not feel he should stand the "gaff" all by himself. He has given the matter considerable thought.

'WALK' UNSCHEDULED

Unless Former Governor Joseph B. Ely of Massachusetts, Former Senator James A. Reed of Missouri and other prominent anti-New Dealers agree to support him, Smith will not make an appearance in Philadelphia.

Stand would vote regular. That is, he would go along with Tammany. In spite of the marked anti-Roosevelt sentiment in "the hall" Tammany may find no alternative but to support the New York delegation and vote for Roosevelt at the convention.

This, however, would be no guarantee that Tammany will support Roosevelt in the lection. Tammany and its chieftains are sore at Farley and Roosevelt because of the skimpy patronage they have received for the national administration.

The Life of Landon

Kansas Friends Start 2 Booms

Following is the second of a series of articles on the life of Governor Alfred M. Landon of Kansas, Republican nominee for president. The series started in Boston Sunday Advertiser.

By BOB HUMPHREYS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Topeka, Kas., June 15—When Alfred M. Landon decided in the closing days of 1931 to run for Governor of Kansas the following year, both he and the Republican party turned a historic corner.

For Landon, a business man with politics for a hobby and civic duty, it meant that forthwith public administration would become his career.

For the Republican party it marked the entrance of a future presidential nominee upon the proving ground of state executive training.

In reaching his decision to make the gubernatorial race, Landon arrived at it in a manner to be remarkably paralleled four years later when he decided that his name should be put forth as a presidential aspirant.

Must Be Demand

When a leading Kansas Republican approached Landon in 1931 suggesting that he run for governor, the politician did not get an immediate answer. Businessman Landon first wanted some facts.

As a political worker who had tasted victory with Governor Reed, as well as defeat in the cause of Theodore Roosevelt's Progressive party, and another Kansan's anti-Klan campaign, Landon held a theory. It was:

A united party organization is usually essential to elect a man to public office, but it is not always enough—There must be a demand for the man from the people themselves, and from the "grass roots," as he called it.

Accordingly, Landon, reserving his decision, hopped into his car and beat a path the length and breadth of Kansas. He missed not a county of the state's 105.

Because a united party machinery was essential, he talked to leaders of all factions. Because there must be a grass roots sentiment, he talked with farmers and tradesmen, the men in the street.

Ring of Truth

Landon said taxes ought to be reduced, the state budget ought to be balanced, and the local units of government should be made by law to reduce expenditures. It was the old song, chorused by office seekers for generations, but this man set it to new notes—it had the ring of truth.

When Landon had ridden the circuit of Kansas counties, he reached his decision. He would run for governor. A shrewd judge of men, he felt deep within him that these party leaders, these farmers and townsmen, had sensed his sincerity, his honesty of purpose, his regard for his own word, once given.

Turn the pages four years to 1935. A group of Landon's former classmates at Kansas University, realizing that for once a political party might have to reach into the farm states for a presidential candidate, approached the Kansas governor wanting to espouse his name. Landon said he would have to think about it.

Now in his second term as governor, his record as Kansas' chief executive would have to stand inspection. What did it show?

The Landon administration had inherited a deficit—not large as state deficits go, but a deficit. This had been erased and the budget balanced.

Out of Red Ink

The highway department was operating in the red ink when Landon took office. It now had a surplus in the bank, even though the administration had cut the fee for auto license tags in half. But highway maintenance had not languished because the department's income had actually been augmented by rigid collection of gasoline taxes and the introduction of greater restrictions on exemptions and refunds.

A cash basis law for local units had been passed, prohibiting the political subdivisions from spending more money than they had on hand.

Even though an income tax had been enacted to reduce the burden on property, the total tax bill had been cut and the tax receipts of any Kansas farmer or townsman would tell you so.

On matters other than fiscal, Landon had supported the child labor amendment, had seen to it that an amendment providing for repeal of Kansas' constitutional bone-dry clause was submitted to the people, and he had maintained a state relief administration free of politics.

Again Landon reverted to his political formula—could the party unite behind one man; could the record of the Governor of Kansas, once made known, spring from the grass roots a demand for his candidacy?

This group of Kansas University alumnae, without funds other than their own and without benefit of organization, leaped into the field.

The Landon boom was under way.

HOUSE PASSES 3 REVENUE BILLS

The House today passed three bills to be sent to the Senate calling for increase in revenue of the state in accordance with Governor Curley's recent budget plans.

On a rising vote without debate the House passed a bill that would increase the state's share in the handle of dog racing. The bill provides that the state shall receive 3½ per cent on a handle up to $50,000 and 5 per cent on all receipts in excess of that amount. At present the state receives 3½ pe ecrent on the entire handle.

The other two bills call for a three-cent gasoline tax for two years starting April 30, 1937, and a 10 per cent surtax on personal income, corporations, legacies and successions for this year.

Hurley to Dance At Club Party

Charles F. Hurley, Democratic nominee for governor, Phillip J. Philbin and James Roosevelt are among those expected to attend the annual dance of the Club Rotunda, Roslindale unit of the Young Democrats of Massachusetts, at the South Shore Country Club tomorrow night.

on this copyrighted article, young Roosevelt said:

"I have no comment to make on anything political whatsoever,"

Whether there has been a break in the friendship of young Roosevelt and Congressman Russell has not been disclosed.

Guarded statements are abroad, however, that all is not well between the congressman and the administration and that the reported buildup for James Roosevelt is unknown to Russell.

An offset to this view is another report that Congressman Russell is "in on it" and "is to be taken care of," probably through an appointment of some kind.

There is no questioning the fact that the two have been very closely connected politically. When Russell, then mayor of Cambridge, entered the contest for Congress two and one-half years ago, young Roosevelt actively supported him and threw all the weight of the national administration behind him.

NAMES ROOSEVELT

More recently, when the slate of delegates to the national convention was made up and Chairman Joseph McGrath allowed the congressman to choose the men and women for the honor from their districts, Congressman Russell named Roosevelt as one of the two delegates from his district, despite the fact that Roosevelt was looked upon as having stepped out of Massachusetts politics.

The late "Billy" Coughlan of Brookline, raised such a fuss over the selection of Roosevelt that a place for him had to be made, and he was put on as an alternate.

James Roosevelt came over from New York and filed a certificate of residence at the Brookline Town Hall. He gave his home address as 305 Walnut street, which is the estate of Dr. Harvey Cushing, his father-in-law.

His re-entry into Massachusetts politics is not sitting very nicely with the Massachusetts politicians, it is known, outside of the group holding down federal posts.

Many of his activities during the first two and one-half years of the present national administration have been bitterly resented, and he has been accused particularly of interfering in the matter of patronage.

Recently, young Roosevelt sent a telegram to the Democratic nominee for governor, State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley, in which he said:

"I look forward to being on the firing line for you in the coming months."

COAKLEY APPROACHED

One of the men understood to have been sounded out on the congressional candidacy of Roosevelt is Daniel H. Coakley of Brighton, member of the governor's council.

The strategy of the situation calls for some careful handling. Congressman Russell must be satisfied and ready to support the younger Roosevelt and the party chieftains must have assurance that their prerogatives in the future will not be encroached upon. Then, there must be created a real demand for his candidacy.

And all those who motored up from here, all rigged out in their best bib and tucker, thanked their lucky stars . . . for when we came back to town we found that Bostonians had not been so fortunate, and that Harriette Sturgis and her wedding party had emerged from St. Paul's in a heavy shower . . . not confetti . . . but rain . . .

The Horace Morisons, who have already opened Terrace Hill Farm, their lovely Peterboro estate, didn't have far to go to attend the Bross-Prince ceremony and reception . . . the third Morison daughter, Arria, was one of the bridesmaids . . . and Mary, the youngest, one of the snappiest of the guests in a gay summery print . . . while Mrs. Morison wore a neutral outfit of all white . . .

Other summer neighbors of the Prince family, Mr. and Mrs. George Foote, also drove over the hills to the wedding . . . and still others on hand to toast Priscilla and John in champagne were Mr. and Mrs. Philip Sharples of Cambridge, who recently presented their debutante daughters . . . and who summer up that way . . . Freddie is graduating from Harvard this week, and you can be sure Leslie Bremer will be proudly looking on at all the doings, just as she has followed his hockey career, never missing a chance to cheer for him . . . DEVOTED TO THE INTEREST OF THE YOUTH OF THE AMERICAS IN AVIATION

TODAY'S PILOTS OF MODELS —TOMORROW'S MODEL PILOTS!

Following an enthusiastic rally of Junior Birdmen flight commanders and sponsors of units, membership in the Boston American wing is expected to make a steady gain during the next few months.

Due to vacations and to the departure of boys and girls for camps, health resorts, beaches and other places for the summer, the membership gains usually fall off at this time of year.

NEARLY 400,000

At the meeting, however, the commanders promised to give special attention to enrolling more girls and boys who want to learn to build and fly model planes, get a rudimentary knowledge of aviation and pave the way for a future career in aeronauticals.

The national membership is now nearly 400,000 and that of the Boston American wing, third largest of the 17 wings, is more than 40,000.

The rally was featured by several reels of motion pictures including "Flying Cadets," showing the training of youths at Brooks Field, Texas, for the U. S. Army Air Corps; scenes from a transcontinental trip in a United Air Lines plane and "Scenic Airways" which showed Grand Canyon, Yellowstone national park, Hawaii, New York, Washington and other points of interest.

Ice cream and cakes, all that the commanders could eat, made up refreshments served at the conclusion of the rally.

FLYING HAWKS GAIN

The "Flying Hawks" of John Winthrop school, Dorchester, are "going to town again." They'll have a stick model flying contest tomorrow following a glider contest in preparation for the Outdoor Wing Air Races early in July.

Fifty-two were present last week during the glider contest which was won by Roy Oro, assistant to Miss Esther E. Larsen, sponsor of the unit. He received the $1 first prize after a flight of 37 seconds. Gordon Oro, his brother, won second prize of 50 cents with a flight of 31 seconds. The next four winners received kits. They are Frank Pinaro, Gus August, Edward Ward and John West.

Fifteen girls competed and one of them made a flight of 16 seconds. These flights indicate that the squadron is making more than satisfactory progress in model plane building and flying and it is not unlikely that one or more of them may be among the 15 winners in the outdoor air races.

Proparvulis Dance Concludes Season

Smart Set Attends

A GOSSAMER FOG swirled in from the sea . . . off shore Minot Light blinked its romantic message, one-three-four (I love you), and the setting was perfect for the Proparvulis Club dance at North Scituate.

It was the group's swan song of the season, a fitting one for their most successful year. The crowd which numbered a half thousand jammed the lobby of this smart hostelry . . . overflowed to the veranda, where a large white canvas offered protection from the salty breezes.

Here the newly-weds, Mr. and Mrs. William O'Mara of Newton . . . she was Mary Appleyard . . . entertained their friends . . . Mary was effective in yellow chiffon . . . tiny buttons marching down the full skirt. With her was Margaret Kelleher in a smart frock of French blue lace.

Mary Cahill of Malden, chairman of the seashore soiree, needed seven league boots for the party . . . dashing about from porch to alcove, from terrace to ballroom. Her black marquisette was quite the smartest gown at the dance . . . its wide bouffant skirt was edged with contrasting ruffles of green and white taffeta . . . and a mess jacket of the same material topped the gown.

Grace Dalton of Newton, executive head of the charity-minded group, wore a lovely gown of crisp white organdie edged with red. Escorting her was Jimmie McShane.

Divided Duties

The evening tasks of collecting bills and checking tickets was shared evenly by the club officers and board members. Marguerite Sweeney chose green print and a corsage of gardenias . . . sister, Dorothy, who directed the choice of music, was attired in lilac flowered crepe and Eleanor Sheerin of Dorchester . . . who's small, dark and most attractive . . . wore coral accessories with her ruffled white net.

Dan Cupid might well have sat back and gloated at his handiwork . . . engaged couples being there in goodly numbers . . . Edith Powers and Robert Riley, Rosemary McEnaney and Weldon Bray of Dorchester. They were guests at Eleanor Sheerin's table which included Mary Adduci, tall and slim in her yellow net gown.

Among the bride-elects were Margaret Lyons of West Roxbury, who becomes Mrs. Andrew Smith sometime in the near future. Margaret wore a smartly-cut frock of red coin-dotted satin.

Julia Clarke, bridge chairman, was escorted by John Mantle, and was guest at Doris Cahill's table. On the twenty-seventh of this month, Julia will be the only attendant at her brother Tom's wedding to Marion McKenna of East Boston. Doris, who was last year's president, wore soft blue lace . . . tiny ruffles covering the skirt of the frock.

Going Abroad

Usher chairman, Nora Mullarkey of Quincy received the bon-voyage wishes of the crowd . . . she sails on the fourth for a two-month jaunt through Europe. Her mother is accompanying her. Pressure of business keeps sister Margaret at home. To Friday night's dance, Margaret wore sea green chiffon . . . a cape of ruffles topping the gown.

Mildred Lorence of Brighton, who joins bridal ranks shortly, was smart in flowered chiffon and Helen Owens of Brookline and Helen Foy of Quincy were also members of this jolly party.

Board members doing their chores efficiently were Grace Delourey, lilacs adorning her white krinkled crepe . . . Beth Kenny of Belmont, whose crepe was splashed with colorful flowers, and Mary McDonald of Brookline, chairman of the tickets, chose a tunic frock of hyacinth lace.

From their table by the fireplace, Esther McCarthy and Jack Skelly took in the merry party . . . Esther's pink and silver brocade very attractive with her dark coloring and Alice Hagan of Somerville brought her cousin, Marie Dean of Randolph as her guest at the Scituate benefit, an optimistic beginning for a jolly season on the South Shore.

* * *

Attractive decorations and an excellent orchestra are the drawing cards at tomorrow night's dance at Cunningham gymnasium in Milton for the benefit of St. Agatha's Church.

Mrs. Frank Oldfield is in charge of the undertaking. Assisting her as vice-chairman are Mrs. Stephen Kett, Mrs. E. H. McLaughlin, Ellean Sweeney, Ruth Pedoley, Frances Riley and Ellen Sweeney.

Refreshments and programs are in charge of Mrs. Edward Stimets, Mrs. Herbert Taylor, Mrs. Joseph Cosgrove, Mrs. Walter McGill, Mrs. George Rice, Mrs. Leo McElwain, Alice Donovan, Dena Catina, Esther Pendis, Mary Murphy and Dorothy Donohue.

Novelites and features for the evening's frolis are being [illegible] by a gentlemen's committee [illegible] Keaney, John Lorden Jr., Willia Sheehan, Martin Haddigan, Ca Catani, Charles Doherty, Jo Pendeley and Walter Shea.

Mary Dunn of Jamaica Plain was one of the attractive Proparvulis Club girls who attended the dance at the Cliff Hotel in North Scituate last Friday evening. Knox Once Lost N. H. Battle But Won Big Moral Victory

JOHN L. SULLIVAN COLONEL FRANK KNOX JOHN O'KEEFE

There are no Republicans and no Democrats on the golf course, and there was no political eyebrow lifting in New Hampshire when John L. Sullivan, former Democratic candidate for gov[illegible] and Colonel Frank Knox, present Republican nominee for the vice-presidency, were [illegible]ught by the cameraman as they started a snappy threesome at the Manchester, N. H., Coun[illegible] Club, with Colonel Knox's secretary, John O'Keefe along as number 3 player and official chaperon.

This is the second of a series of exclusive articles telling [illegible] the [illegible] story of the New England career of Colonel Frank Knox, Republican nominee for the vice-presidency. [illegible] will continue in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.

By FRED PERKINS

Manchester, N. H., June 15—A flap-jack eating contest and a race for the New Hampshire governorship helped Edmund F. Jewell to an accurate appraisal of the character of his life-long friend, Republican Vice-Presidential Nominee Frank Knox.

Jewell, who is 22 years Colonel Knox's junior, was [illegible] when Knox and his partner John [illegible] were publishing the Sault Ste. Marie Evening [illegible] and were crusading at the [illegible] of their lives and their [illegible] against frontier town [illegible] conditions of the early 1900's.

Old, New Times!

"One of my earliest recollections of Frank Knox," he said, "concerns a hunting and fishing trip to Canada, back almost 30 years ago.

"Knox and my father took me along. Our camp was pitched on an island in a lake, and we had [illegible] to do the cooking and paddling.

"On the first morning [illegible] the guide mixed us up a [illegible] of flapjacks.

"[illegible] were of solid construction, built to last an eater [illegible] strenuous day. In regular backwoods style, the guide made each cake the full size of the frypan and almost three-quarters of an inch thick.

"I was just a growing kid, of course, with rubber stomach and an anaconda's appetite. I guess I ate as many of the flapjacks as all the rest of the party put together, but I was still going strong when the big platter was empty.

"Knox, who had an intuitive knowledge of the workings of a boyish mind, caught me looking longingly at a remnant of uncooked batter in a bowl by the fire. He knew I was too bashful to ask to have more flapjacks fried. He knew, too, that I'd refuse to make an out and out pig of myself by eating all alone.

"'Tell you what, Ned,' he said to me. 'It's a shame to waste that pancake batter. There's enough for two flapjacks. If I'll eat one, will you eat the other?'

"I allowed I would.

"And I did, without a bit of trouble.

"Knox ate his, too, as he had promised. He was planning to do some fishing. I took a little rifle my father had given me and went looking for squirrels.

"When I came back to camp, my father was there all alone.

"'Where's Mr. Knox and the guide?' I wanted to know.

"'Frank had an attack of acute indigestion,' my father told me. 'The guide had to take him to a doctor on the mainland.'

"Maybe there's nothing heroic in a bellyache. But Frank Knox hadn't eaten that extra flapjack because he wanted it. He had eaten it because he knew my mouth was watering for mine.

Loyalty to Pals

"Frank Knox has always been a man who would go through for a friend. I think that loyalty to his associates and to his pals is one of his outstanding characteristics.

"Look, for instance, at the men whom he brought here to Manchester with him. There are John Muehling, his partner; Neil Dekker, the business manager of the Union and Leader; Percy Markham, the composing room foreman, and Louis Laing, dead now, who was press room foreman.

"They were all shoulder to shoulder with Knox in the shoestring days in Grand Rapids and Sault Ste. Marie. He found places for them here. He's seen to it that they benefited as things grew easier.

"I was too young to be in newspaper work in the 'Soo,' but Knox placed me with the Union-Leader here after the war.

"There's been a lot of talk about Colonel Knox's defeat when John Winant beat him out for the Republican nomination for the New Hampshire governorship in 1924.

"But, if the real story of that election were to be told, the public might realize that Knox lost the nomination—but won a moral victory.

"In the first place, he only spent about one-sixth as much as the Winant forces.

"John Muehling told him, 'Frank, it costs money to be elected to office. Successful political campaigns require cash'."

Colonel Knox just shook his head stubbornly.

"'I've got a hunch', he said, 'that I can win this election on the issues. If I can't, well, I'll lose. But anyhow I'm going to try.'

"He did try—and he only missed the nomination by a very narrow margin. Nomination, that year, was equivalent to election.

"What always seemed to me to be the deciding factor in the contest was Colonel Knox's uncompromising attitude toward the Ku Klux Klan. The Klan was strong in New Hampshire at the time—and its members weren't riff-raff but leading citizens.

"With many of these citizens, Knox was personally friendly. But he was bitterly opposed to Klan methods and to the Klan as an organization.

"Almost on the eve of the primaries, he wrote and published an editorial assailing the Klan as un-American in its conception and mistaken and short-sighted in its program.

"It was a pretty hot slam, and the Klan leaders couldn't ignore it.

"One of the most influential of the Kleagles—or whatever they called themselves—went to see Knox in his office.

"'Colonel,' he said, 'the Klan would like to back your candidacy. You're a veteran of two wars. You're 100 per cent American. You're a Mason. You'd make New Hampshire a good governor.

"'Just you fix up another editorial. Print something to take the sting out of that first blast you let loose on us. Then we'll send you to the State House, sure.'

"Knox never hesitated a minute.

"'I can't do it,' he said. 'I believe you fellows have the wrong idea. I think your methods are altogether out of keeping with American tradition and principles. I've put the paper on record against you. I'm going to stick to my guns.'

"The visiting Klansman persisted.

"'All right,' he said, 'we'll forget the newspaper end of it. We're having a big meeting Sunday. Come and speak to us. Simply say that, personally and privately, you sympathize with the Klan's objectives, that as governor you won't be actively and militantly anti-Klan. Just do that much to save our face and we'll go through for you.'

"Colonel Knox stood up and ended the interview.

"'I'm sorry,' he said. 'Personally, I have the highest regard for you and many of your associates. But I can't endorse the Klan, editorially or privately. I want to be governor—but not that bad.'

"He didn't get to be governor. That's political history. Call it a defeat if you want to. I call it a victory!"

This intimate story of the New Hampshire and New England career of Colonel Frank Knox, Republican vice-presidential nominee, will be continued in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.

"WHEN I LOVED YOU"

By Hazel Livingston

[illegible] SIXTEEN

If only the rug were better! Surely they could have saved ONE Oriental out of the Mill Valley house! This imitation one was just terrible. It would be so much better to have the floor bare. But it was tacked down, and mother wouldn't let her take it up anyway, because so much bare floor shows the dust.

It isn't that I want him to think we're richer than we are, or that I want to impress him, the way mother thinks I do, she told herself. It's just that I want to have a beautiful place to see him in—and I want to look as beautiful as I can for him—

So there was a last [illegible] dusting, a having of ivory candles and "Lowe[illegible]" [illegible] and an arranging and rearranging of sturdy [illegible] and orange marigolds from the garden.

"You'd th[illegible] was the Prince of Wales [illegible]. I never heard such carryings [illegible]." Evelyn [illegible]gled, when everything was ready and Jan brushed and powdered and lip-sticked to the point of perfection, wandered up and down the hall waiting [illegible] for the sound of his car [illegible] up the hill.

The Door Bell!

"He's a little late," she said coming back to the kitchen [illegible] on the tea kettle. "I'm going to have everything ready for the tea."

"Maybe he isn't coming. You mustn't be too disappointed if he doesn't come, darling. You know they've just got back and he's busy."

"Oh, he'll come," Jan [illegible]. "He said he would."

She didn't doubt that he'd come. But would he be the same? Would he still love her? Would everything be as it had always been? Maybe it would be better if he didn't come at all. Maybe—

The door bell rang.

"Shall I [illegible]?" Evelyn asked.

"No [illegible]. I might as well go. I'll have to see him some time."

They smiled at each other a little shyly as he came up the stairs to her.

"You haven't changed, have you, Lowell?"

"Oh, Jan—Jan, darling! You're just the same! I was so afraid you'd be different. A year is such a long time!"

"Oh Lowell—when you [illegible] home it's l[illegible] than that."

"But I'm home now. You haven't said that you're glad to see me."

"Oh—I am, of course. Only I'm so upset seeing you and wondering about everything."

Evelyn had been listening from just inside her bedroom. My goodness, she thought, aren't they babyish? I wonder if he finally got up nerve to kiss her! Well, I hope he notices the flowers and things. She's certainly slaved to fix that room!

An hour went by. Maybe she'd better bring in the tea.

"Oh, thank you, mother!" Jan said, when Evelyn came in with the tray. "I was just going out to get it—but we were talking—and I forgot—"

"I made cinnamon toast," Evelyn said presently, because they seemed to be overlooking it.

"Oh!—yes—thank you, mother."

"I'm so very fond of it," Lowell said, accepting a piece which she laid on his plate, and forgot to eat.

Jan just took one bite of hers.

Was there something wrong with it? Evelyn wondered. She tried a piece, and then another. There was nothing wrong with it. It was wonderful cinnamon toast. So she ate it all, bit by bit, and then, half amused, half annoyed, went back to her room.

"What did he have to say for himself?" she demanded when at last he had gone.

Evelyn Wonders

"Oh—he's going to Santa Clara [illegible]. But he'll be home [illegible]. They're going to have some parties."

"Well, I hope they ask [illegible]body besides you to [illegible]. It wouldn't hurt them [illegible] to do something for Dorathea [illegible] even [illegible]. It seems a little queer [illegible] the [illegible] vited. After all, we [illegible]ly." Jan [illegible] could say something [illegible] of course!"

"Oh mom! [illegible]"

"Then I will. [illegible]"

Despite her worry over [illegible] expenses—the gas [illegible] phone bill, and all the other bills—and her anxiety over Dorathea's continued chumminess with [illegible] Rogers, Evelyn found time for a [illegible] pleased acceptance of her [illegible] daughter's [illegible] of a Kramer. [illegible] hints planned and ingenious [illegible] senora Kramer was deaf. The invitations were for Jan [illegible].

By no maternal illusion could the thin fair-haired Jan be considered a beauty. Accustomed to her own opulent loveliness and the arresting beauty of Dorathea, Evelyn just couldn't understand it.

What did the [illegible] Kramer boy see in Jan? With a world of dashing young [illegible] to choose from why [illegible] her? How did the Kramers feel about it? Did they [illegible] strange affair [illegible]?

When she wasn't [illegible] with one of the tenants, or absorbed in her sewing, or actually [illegible] with one of the [illegible] friends as she jokingly [illegible] them, Evelyn pondered [illegible] schemed to sound out the unfathomable senora.

After mama's death the senora never called but Evelyn made the pilgrimage to the Mill Valley house every few weeks at [illegible] time.

An Unwelcome Guest

There were usually other guests, and to these she chatted, boastfully [illegible]. Everyone knew that it had been her home, that her family, the Faileys, had built it, had once owned the tapestries, the [illegible] the very silver service! From her manner she inferred that all true aristocrats were now poor as church mice and only the vulgar could buy caviar and new clothes.

Smilingly [illegible] the senora listened. She might have been deaf, for all the sign she made. Never once did she show that her uninvited guest was unwelcome, but never once did she invite her to come again.

Old Furniture Made New

To make the sideboard, or "Welsh dresser," dig up that old kitchen cabinet, remove upper doors, stick wallpaper in "garden vegetable" pattern back of shelves and on lower doors.

For sticking on the paper use rubber cement, sold in a 10-cent tube. Paint or enamel the rest a soft Delft blue. Curtains of transparent yellow Argentine cloth (or organdy) protect the dishes from dust. Smart in the kitchen or on that screened porch where summer lunches are served.

The bookshelf-table [illegible] second sketch is made from an old, scarred dining-room buffet. Varnish-remover, a dull putty-knife, and wire wool took off all the old varnish, revealing the good oak beneath. Good wood is worth treating to a natural finish. Give it a coat of colorless shellac, followed next day by a coat of wax. Inferior wood could be enameled a soft-toned ivory, gray, or sage green.

For a buffet of natural wood, the shelves are smart enameled in vermillion, that red [illegible] truck. Or use jade green or bright blue to suit room.

Send 15c for our booklet, HOW TO PAINT AND REFINISH FURNITURE, to Boston Evening American, Home Institute, 109 West 19th street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

Recipes FOR Wedding CAKE

FROM MARTHA LEE'S MONDAY MORNING BROADCAST OVER STATION WMEX

THE WEDDING cake is usually the centerpiece for the wedding breakfast, luncheon or reception. Its decoration is a problem confronting the June bride for so often a family recipe is used and the cake baked at home.

It may then be taken to the professional to be iced or a few festive touches may be put on it at home. Arm yourself in advance with pastry tube and ornamental frosting and practice on the cakes made from now on.

Wedding cake is a rich fruit cake and, of course, improves with age, so that it can be made months in advance.

Bride's cake is a white cake and the bridegroom's a spice cake. If two cakes are made, the wedding cake may be packed in boxes ready to distribute to the guests. The bride need cut only the first piece from the cake, a member of the family or the maid distributes the rest.

BRIDE'S CAKE

- 3¼ cups sifted cake flour
- 1½ teaspoons double-acting baking powder
- 1⅛ cups butter
- 2 cups sugar
- 1¼ cups egg whites, unbeaten
- ½ teaspoon vanilla
- ¼ teaspoon almond extract

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually and cream together until light and fluffy. Add egg whites, ¼ cup at a time, beating about three minutes after each addition. Add flour, a small amount at a time, beating well after each addition.

Add flavoring and beat vigorously. Turn into 10-inch tube pan which has been greased, lined on bottom, sides and around tube with heavy paper, and again greased. Bake in slow oven (275 deg. F.) 1 hour; then increase heat slightly, to 300 deg. F. and bake 50 minutes longer, or until done.

Insert favors, if desired, wrapping each in waxed paper, and pressing into small slits cut in cake. Spread Ornamental Butter Frosting smoothly on top and sides of cake. Decorate with simple borders, festoons and rosettes of Ornamental Butter Frosting, and trim with silver dragees. Serve on silver tray or platter surrounded with delicate sprays of fern, cosmos or bridal wreath. Place special bridal favor on top of cake, or tie small wedding bells or other favors to white ribbons and intertwine through sprays.

BRIDEGROOM'S CAKE

- 1 cup butter
- 2 cups brown sugar
- 6 eggs
- 1 cup coffee
- 1 cup molasses
- 4½ cups flour
- 2 tsps. soda
- ½ tsp. cloves
- 1 tsp. nutmeg
- 1 tsp. allspice
- 2 tsps. cinnamon
- 2 pounds raisins
- 1 pound dates
- ½ pound figs
- 2 pounds currants
- ½ pound candied lemon peel
- ½ pound candied orange peel
- ½ pound citron

Cream the butter and sugar together. Add the slightly beaten eggs. Heat the coffee, mix with the molasses and add alternately with the flour sifted with the soda and spices. Add the chopped fruit and pour into well-greased pans. Cover tightly with greased paper and steam three hours. Then bake an hour and a half in a slow oven, 250 deg. F. Makes three loaves, about ten pounds.

"Your Figure, Madame!"

By IDA JEAN KAIN

(Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

YOU CAN'T keep sweet if you are hungry, so why not eat and grow slim on a reducing menu that allows you all the food you need—but with the minimum of calories?

It is the number of calories, not the number of foods in a meal, that determines your weight. The daily menus offer a variety of food, but are limited to 1200 calories, which will not support adipose tissue.

Maybe you don't take any stock in this calorie folderol, but if you are one of those hapless overweights who have mismanaged your calories for years and gone hungry (sometimes) it is time to try a balanced menu! A few scientific facts properly applied will help you to lose more than a few pounds of unnecessary weight.

Balanced Menu

Start your menu planning with the essential foods you would normally include in your day's dietary. Lean meat, eggs, skimmed milk or buttermilk, fresh fruits and vegetables and a limited amount of butter and whole grain bread lay the foundation for a healthy reducing diet, and may easily be included in a thousand-calorie menu.

Take a good breakfast: It turns that 11 o'clock let-down into a high energy level. Yet you can lose weight on a breakfast menu containing 250 to 300 calories, which is more than many of you ordinarily take.

Food is a stimulant, and to apportion your calories for energy and well-being use 300 to 400 for luncheon. This amount, eked out with a cup o' tea at 3 o'clock will carry your disposition through the next five hours without a sag.

Restrict dinner at night to 500 or 700 calories at the most. This is the "one decent meal a day" that the average reducer gains on. As it works out, fat melts faster on a light evening meal, and the person who overeats at dinner is almost invariably overweight. An ideal reducing plan would allot most of the calories to the noon meal, and whenever practicable this plan should be adopted. In the long run the most satisfactory plan is the one that lends itself easily to daily routine.

However, if you insist on novelty with your reducing, you might like this idea: Eat all the breakfast and all the lunch you wish . . . don't diet. Eat! But skip dinner at night. Take no calories from lunch, or dinner, at noon until breakfast the following morning. This plan doesn't work with any meals except breakfast and lunch.

Needless to say, NEVER eat before retiring, for the midnight snack holds the record as the shortest cut to avoirdupois.

Embarrassment of Grand Slam Debacle

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

As a rule, there is nothing timid about experts when it comes to doubling for penalties; in fact, some of them wil admit that they use "hair-line doubles" to a dangerous degree. But this applies almost exclusively to less-than-slam contracts.

Differing from average players who double slams on the specious notion that "12 or 13 tricks are hard to make," experts are extremely chary of doubling a voluntary bid in the upper altitudes.

Their caution is usually based on the reasoning that when the opponents voluntarily bid a slam, they know pretty well what they are doing. In today's hand, imagine the embarrassment [illegible] of the declarer's team [illegible] of the defenders as well when a grand slam contract went down five tricks without a double!

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
3 N T	Pass	4 ♣	Pass
5 N T	Pass	6 ♣	Pass
7 ♣	Pass	Pass	Pass

Obviously, the North player was not an expert. His bidding was of the kangaroo variety, the seven club bid being particularly bad considering all of his previous leaping.

West selected the ten of hearts as the most strategic opening lead.

Dummy's Ace [illegible] and the King of trumps was laid down, followed by the Jack. When East showed out, the declarer had a vision of what was apt to happen. He won with the club Ace and finessed against the diamond king. East gobbled up this trick and returned a low heart. Declarer ruffed and West dropped his King.

The Ace of diamonds blocked the suit—declarer led to it but could return to his own hand only with another ruff. Now when he led a third round of diamonds, West ruffed with the club eight and picked up the one remaining trump in each hand. After that, declarer's own hand was dead and dummy could take only the Ace and King of spades.

The net result was a five-trick penalty! And the amusing part was that neither East nor West could have doubled the contract with any degree of assurance!

As a matter of fact, declarer would have saved a trick by properly leading the five of clubs from dummy instead of the Jack. With the latter card left intact, on the third lead of diamonds West would have been forced to trump in with his good Queen of clubs and to return a trump in order to stop dummy's Jack and declarer's ten from being used separately as ruffing cards.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A Lace-Curtained Prison Wife Confesses Her Tragic Problem

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

There are prisons with lace-curtained windows. You'll find them in our big cities, in our tiny hamlets, even in the metropolitan apartment house.

The loveless home—I refer to that, of course. Husband prematurely old. Wife thirsting vainly for the lost joys of youth. Misunderstanding growing into a great menace, frustrating every possibility for peace and contentment.

Of such a home does Mrs. L. W. write today. You'll like her letter, also the interesting and typical problem she gives us. Here it is:

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

Just because one is married does he have to settle down to humdrum existence?

My husband and I have been married two years, both devoid of pleasure. He thinks married couples should stay home all the time, foregoing even the most innocent of recreations.

I, on the other hand, believe we should enjoy our automobile, attend the movies, go to parties and be the happy pair we were before marriage.

You see, Miss Fairfax, I'm only 21, 11 years younger than my husband. Is the difference in our ages responsible for our inability to think alike? MRS. L. W.

MY DEAR FRIEND

Marriage, while making some difference in everyone's life, should never turn a home into a prison, in which husband and wife are no happier than convicts. Proper recreation is necessary; life without it doesn't mean much.

Were I you, I'd join a club, take an active interest in my church and its activities, and cultivate friendships among other wives. I'd do my best to make outside interests make up for the lack of interest at home.

And a few months hence, when your husband wearies of spending long, lonely hours at home, you will in all probability behold a changed man.

No man of 32 should make himself a hermit. We grow old soon enough. And it's always best to enjoy life as long as it gives us the opportunity.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

[illegible] in a Southern [illegible] sanitarium for two years, recently came home and renewed a friendship with a fellow whom all but she regard as worthless. With him, it's just one scrape after another. No sooner is he out of trouble than he's back in it.

You'd think a girl in her late twenties would have better judgment, but not my daughter. Every word I say is wasted effort. She continues to entertain him on the porch and to grasp at every invitation he gives her.

What can I do to discourage this affair? Would it be a good idea to send her to a relative in a distant city?

MAINE, 1886.

DEAR READER

Your daughter, spending two years in a far-away sanitarium, comes home, renews a girlhood friendship. Nothing could be more logical.

It would be foolish, I think, to end this courtship right now. Happiness accomplishes miracles, and no one needs a miracle more than one stricken with that terrible disease, tuberculosis.

The sorrow the deliberate breaking of her love affair would cause might very likely bring about a relapse, from which your daughter could not recover.

Your best course is to encourage your daughter to let this man be her friend, not her husband. Marriage should not be considered until her illness has entirely disappeared.

Mothers' words, scoldings or [illegible] seldom halt marriages. If they did, there'd be a drastic dropping off in the number of wives.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

How can I cultivate the friendship of a boy who comes to my home frequently to see my brothers? He is everything a husband should be, and it won't be my fault if I fail to make him mine.

I know his telephone number and would like to give him a ring and ask him to go to the beach Sunday with me. Would that be too bold? MISS ALICE.

MY DEAR ALICE

If you want this boy to have one big laugh, call him up. There are things well-mannered young women don't do. And calling up and making dates with brothers' friends is not the least of them.

When this young man comes to your home, talk to him. Learn the subjects in which he's interested and build your conversation about those subjects. Men, even young men, like to think women are interested in them. You'll find this boy no exception.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 17 and have been corresponding with a boy, 19, for some time. Recently, I underwent a serious operation and am now ready for a vacation and rest.

My problem is where to go. Would it be proper to accept my friend's invitation to his home? I really want to meet his father and mother. MARGE

MY DEAR MARGE

It would be improper to visit this young man's home on his invitation. Good etiquette obliges you to wait until you are asked by his mother. It is her home, you know.

If she does write you, expressing a wish to have you be her guest, you should feel free to take the trip. The change would do you good.

Right Shade Is Highly Important

By DONNA GRACE

WITH the number of beauty aids we may have, and with guides and charts to follow, the average girl should not have much trouble in selecting a correct make-up for herself.

Some girls are so clever in the art of selecting just the right shade of rouges and powders, they know their combinations and blendings perfectly. When they are ready to step out for a day of business, or for shopping and the usual activities, they are all very attractive.

As one girl wrote recently, "I know I am good looking when I have finished my make-up, but the trouble is it does not stay looking lovely. After a few hours it is all shiny, and by the middle of the day there is hardly a trace of any make-up left."

The next question is, what kind of make-up is there that will stay on and look lovely all day? We all know some girls whose make-up is perfect from the time it is applied until the end of the day, when it is removed.

What secret of make-up do these girls possess and just what do they do to keep the skin smooth with no trace of the shine and somewhat disheveled appearance that so many of us have before the day is half over? It is a rather important question, too. We do want to know it if there is a secret way of preserving any make-up throughout the day.

* * *

The girl whose skin is dry may possibly have no trouble in keeping her face from becoming shiny, but even so, her make-up will need some freshening before the day is over, if she wants to keep a well-groomed appearance.

The girl whose skin is oily, or inclined to any moisture, or perspiration cannot expect any make-up to last more than a few hours at the most.

There are, of course, some make-up foundations that may preserve the freshness a bit, but even these need many hours.

Powder must not be applied unless the surface is smooth. This can be done very satisfactorily with the aid of a simple pack. The pack I am giving you here will bleach the skin a little, too. Take a glass, or porcelain bowl, and put in the following:

1 teaspoonful of bay rum.

* * *

The cleansing cream alone may be used for the preparation. The first light application of the cream is spread over the face and neck and removed at once. This is to remove any dust or grime from the skin surface. The next application is rubbed in so as to remove the dry skin that is constantly shedding.

SALEM ARTIST RAPS WITCHCRAFT STORIES

By PEGGY DOYLE

Kipling might well have meant Salem and Hollywood when he penned those memorable lines about East being East and West, West and their inability to get together on a how-be-yah, neighbor basis.

Or so thinks Philip Little, noted artist, long-time resident and amateur historian of Salem, particularly when he considers Paramount Pictures' recently announced plan to translate his beloved city's witchcraft days into the celluloid.

"Witchcraft synonymous with Salem!" exclaims the exasperated Mr. Little—and if it weren't for the dignity of his 79 years and the glint of humor that lingers in his eyes even when he's hot under the collar the verb would be "sputters."

JUST BALDERDASH

"How any intelligent, well-informed individual, at this late day, can identify Salem with witchcraft and overlook her great clipper-ship days when she was the greatest shipping-port in the New World is beyond my limited comprehension.

"Salem IS clipper-ships and sailing and sailors. She was ideally situated for maritime adventure, and the self-reliance and enterprise of the early settlers created the commercial activity of the town.

"The very first comers to Salem had been fishing for three years at Cape Ann, before they came up along the beautiful North Shore, past Baker's Island and the Beverly shore to North River and landed at the foot of what is now Conant street.

"The 'Sacred Cod' hanging in the legislature chamber at the State House is an emblem of the fish business that, since the days of Endecott and Winthrop, brought great wealth to the commonwealth."

GROWS LYRICAL

On the subject of the old square-riggers, Mr. Little gets positively lyrical as do most tradition-conscious Salemites.

"With imperfect nautical instruments and without charts, these gallant lads guided their craft through the unknown seas and along shores dangerous with coral reefs with no warning lighthouse.

"And mind you, they were not only responsible for the navigation of their ship, but for the whole business of their voyage, for there were no cables in those days and the owners could not telegraph instructions.

"It was their judgment, and theirs alone, which governed the selling of the outgoing cargoes and the buying of goods that could be disposed of in this country.

LAUDS COURAGE

"Nor were there letters of credit in those days. Imagine, then, the tremendous concern they must have felt carrying their kegs of clinking silver dollars through the pirate-infested, unknown waters.

"The dauntless courage of these men, their sturdy self-reliance, their Christian faith in the very jaws of defeat—THIS is the stuff of which Salem is made.

"'Maid of Salem' they tell me is the picture the great director, Frank Lloyd, is about to put into production next August. It's supposed to be a story about Salem and witchcraft in the 17th century.

"Don't they realize in Hollywood that two centuries ago when belief in witchcraft was world-wide it was Salem that was responsible for the breaking up of the miserable delusion?

CHAPTER 30

MY STATELY mother-in-law did not leave me long in doubt as to her mood.

My STATELY mother-in-law did not leave me long in doubt as to her mood.

She swept down the living room toward me with all the dignity and hauteur which a queen is popularly supposed to have, and when she neared me, she spoke affably enough, but with the manner she would have employed to a distant relative to whom she felt obliged to offer courtesy.

"Ah! Margaret," she said. "I am glad to find you alone. Can you spare me five minutes, or have you something pressing on hand?"

It was a mood and a speech with which I was most familiar. She was not yet ready to accord me open forgiveness, or to restore me to "full fellowship" with her. But that she was secretly cognizant of her own folly in taking offense at Junior's inadvertent revelation in the nursery, I was as sure as I was that another hour or two would swing her mood to its normal brusque kindliness.

ANSWERS WITH DIGNITY

Just now, however, there was but one way to deal with her, and the experience of years enabled me to grasp it immediately. With a dignity that matched her own, I answered her query.

"I am always at your service, Mother," I told her, "and I have nothing on hand at present. Will you not sit down, and let me hear what it is you wish of me?"

She looked around the room loftily.

"I will take that chair" she said, indicating one half-way across the room. Dutifully I brought it to her, gauging by the request the depth of the resentment she still was cherishing against me, for, usually, she is most considerate of me physically, always insistent that I do not over-exert myself. I noticed, however, with a suppressed smile, that the chair she had chosen was an exceedingly light one. She meant to make me wait upon her, but she would do nothing that might injure me.

I placed it opposite the one in which I had been sitting, and she seated herself in it with a flounce of her skirts. Then she loftily waved me to my own chair.

SPEAKS ABOUT MARY

"Be seated, Margaret," she said, "and please do not interrupt me when I have begun speaking. It is about Mary that I wish to speak to you," she said. "Do you realize that the girl is on the verge of a nervous breakdown?"

Having just been adjured not to interrupt her, I hesitated to answer the question, and my mother glared at me banefully.

"What's the matter with you?" she barked. "Is your hearing affected, or are you simply inattentive?"

"Please believe me, Mother," I said with the Uriah Heep note which I knew would gratify her. "I am neither deaf nor unmindful of what you are saying. I am simply trying to marshal my ideas concerning Mary, so that I may answer you intelligently."

"Don't exert yourself," she retorted with a sneer. "The answer ought not to tax your brain very severely. Have you or have you not noticed Mary's extreme nervousness?"

"Yes, I have," I answered, "but—"

"Never mind the 'but,'" she said caustically. "It's a straight answer I want. You've given it, now don't spoil it by hemming and hawing an amendment to it. Now what's to be done about it?"

I guessed that this was a rhetorical question, calling for no answer, and I kept silence. My surmise was a lucky one, for my mother-in-law swept on.

TOLD OF HER TROUBLES

"She told me of the task which Philip Veritzen has set for his son, and of the long hours of loneliness it entails for her. She also told me that for a while Mr. Veritzen had stopped her training. These things leave her with idleness and loneliness—two things which so young a woman should not experience. I told her to come home at once and stay as long as this task of Noel's lasted, and she and Noel agreed very gratefully, I thought.

"But that does not solve the problem wholly," my mother-in-law went on, and I realized by her tone that she was becoming so absorbed in her beloved granddaughter's problem that she was forgetting her rancor. "Mary needs something to draw her out of herself altogether, and I have been giving the matter a great deal of thought since I have talked with her and realized the state she was in. I believe I have arrived at the right solution—that is, if you give me your approval. After all, it is your child whose welfare will be at stake if my plan is adopted, and you should have the last word."

Tuberculosis Warnings

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

AS USUAL, the alert and useful National Tuberculosis Association sends an important message to all America. Its slogan this year is "Early Diagnosis."

By means of the "tuberculin test," as it is called, microscopic examination of the sputum reveals the germs. By the use of the x-ray it is possible to detect the disease far earlier than in former years. This is splendid, but of what value are these improvements if the public does not take advantage of them? Tuberculosis can be successfully combatted only by being constantly on guard against the disease.

Bear in mind that tuberculosis may be present without any outstanding signs, but it gives certain warnings. There are four common symptoms of the disease. They are not always definite evidences of the existence of tuberculosis, but if present they should send you to the doctor for him to decide.

The first sign of importance is that of being quickly tired. If you tire easily after ordinary work or play, it may be caused by some trivial disorder. But that may be the first warning of tuberculosis.

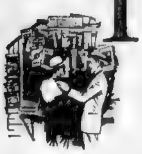
"Pardon me, Sir— do you own a car?"

–the answer revealed the world's richest market for manufacturers



TWO THOUSAND residents of New York, Pittsburgh, and Omaha were mildly surprised, last fall, to find themselves addressed by courteous strangers who asked the following questions:

"Pardon me, sir—do you own an automobile? Would you mind letting me look at its tires? What make of tire did you last buy?"

These questions were asked of buyers of The American Weekly at newsstands, or in their homes.

This search for automobile owners was made in the very places where the percentage of owners to population is relatively low. The three cities mentioned, as a group, rank more than 20% below the national average in automobile ownership in proportion to families.

What the survey revealed

Reversing the usual procedure, this survey was deliberately designed to reveal facts concerning what might be regarded as the less promising portions of the automotive market within the circulation of The American Weekly. A leading tire manufacturer had questioned whether he could advertise profitably in a magazine which admittedly cuts a cross-section through the populations of metropolitan centers representing a wide diversity of social and industrial conditions.

Conducted by an independent research organization, the survey yielded the following facts: of the two thousand purchasers of The American Weekly covered in the investigation, 55% were found to own automobiles; 30% of all cars were late models (double the national average); 69% of the most recent tire purchases had been of nationally advertised lines. These figures represent the less prosperous circulation levels of The American Weekly. Yet, even on this conservative basis, a projection for the entire circulation would show a total of:

3,280,473 car-owning families

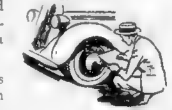
More car owners than any other national magazine has readers! With more than 15 million tires in actual use!

The tire manufacturer, surprised but convinced, is this year carrying his first schedule of advertising in The American Weekly. Could any advertiser afford to overlook so vast a market? And here, in the last analysis, is the only volume market for any product.

Where else can you find millions of customers except among the millions of people living in the important trading areas of the country where the bulk of all merchandise is sold? In these areas, comprising but one-fifth of the nation's counties, four-fifths of all retail sales are made. In them are located all of the 995 key cities of 10,000 population and over that alone account for 70% of all retail sales.

And how can this market be reached more effectively and economically than through The American Weekly, the one magazine that concentrates the world's largest circulation in these rich trading areas and reaches the greatest number of people who buy goods? In 627 of the 995 key cities, it reaches 20% to 50% of all the families. With one powerful impact, it commands an audience of 5,858,468 families (six months' average ending March 31, 1936)—one-fourth of all English-publication-reading families in America.

Nearly six million families read—and BUY



No other national magazine has ever attracted so vast an audience. None has ever captured the interest of so many different types of people. (The tire survey showed automobile ownership ranging all the way from the low-priced Chevrolets, Fords and Plymouths to Pierce-Arrows, Packards, Cadillacs, Lincolns, La Salles.)

Social leaders and stenographers, bankers and bookkeepers—all are irresistibly drawn to the pages of the world's most fascinating magazine. All respond to an editorial appeal rooted deep in the sixteen basic elements of human interest by an Editor who knows "What Interests People and Why."

Advertisers know the measure of this intense reader interest. Specific sales results (details upon request) tell the story of the responsiveness of these nearly six million families, living and spending in the world's richest market.

Where this magazine goes

The American Weekly is the largest magazine in the world. It is distributed through the 17 great Hearst Sunday newspapers. In 627 of America's 995 towns and cities of 10,000 population and over, The American Weekly concentrates 67% of its circulation.

In each of 174 cities, it reaches better than one out of every two families
In 144 more cities, 40 to 50% of the families
In an additional 134 cities, 30 to 40%
In another 175 cities, 20 to 30%

. . . and, in addition, more than 2,000,000 families in thousands of other communities, large and small, regularly buy and read The American Weekly.

Cock-A-Doodle-Doo!

The June 7th issue was the largest in volume of advertising and revenue in the history of The American Weekly and May was the fifth successive month of revenue and linage gains for the year 1936.

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

It looks as if it were going to be more of a national campaign than anybody in these parts might reasonably expect. The political commentators allow with a considerable air of sincerity that since 1932 a new Republicanism has emerged, that the Old Guard has been shelved, and that the management of the campaign will be in the hands of younger men, men of the agricultural Middle-West of the sort who used in Theodore's day to call themselves progressives and, now, in spite of the bad odor about the word—as the winds blow from Washington—like to call themselves liberals.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

The word "old guard" is perhaps misleading. When a middle-aged person thinks of the old guard he thinks at least as far back as Boies Penrose and the crowd that dictated the nomination of Warren Gamaliel Harding. But that is too ancient history. By "Old Guard" today we mean those comparatively youthful men who kept cool with Coolidge or went down with Hoover—for example, Moses of New Hampshire.

Little Resemblance To Old Republicanism

Although there were enough of them to influence the platform, the shape Governor Landon left it in after his telegram can be hardly satisfactory to them as they remember it on their way home from Cleveland. The new Republicanism of the Middle West has little resemblance to the old. Perhaps that is why we expect it to put up a fighting campaign and give Mr. Roosevelt a run for his money.

The chances are that the old Republicans of the East will have to fall in line. They will have to do so because a few influential younger Republicans here seem determined to go along with them. Young Mr. Lodge, for instance, young Mr. Weeks. Even young Mr. Gaspar Bacon, although his seconding speech for Governor Landon creaked rather badly.

In the same way Mr. Richardson learned that Hoover meant nothing to the young Republicans any longer. There is without doubt going to be a new deal in Republicanism, a counter-fire to the raw deal in Democracy.

Yankee Stock Practical, Thorough

I suspect that the country is going to get it firmly fixed in its head that Governor Landon is another Calvin Coolidge, born of strong, Yankee stock, laborious, simple in his tastes, plain in his ideas, economical, practical and throughly American.

I can think of no happier auspices for a candidate fated to be the spear-head of the opposition to the New Deal. His comparatively sudden and sweeping accession of support was of much the same character as that which almost unasked poured in upon Mr. Coolidge as he ended his first term and came up for election in 1924. It was not altogether comprehensible, but about its power and enthusiasm there could not be the slightest doubt. It looks as if Goveronor Landon is going to be the recipient of precisely that kind of support, caused by exactly the same sense of trust and understanding on the part of the plain men and women of America as Coolidge enjoyed.

"Bedtime" Rhetoric Less Definite

If that is true he will be Mr. Roosevelt's most dangerous opponent. The country as a whole has become fairly skeptical and even a bit amused by Mr. Roosevelt's beautiful radio "bedtime" rhetoric, which has been getting more and more prophetic and reassuring while actually becoming less and less definite. In contrast to that Governor Landon's telegram was the very best kind of antidote. It was specific, it was definite, it rang true, it gave people something to set their teeth in.

I suspect that the Governor will prove a stronger antagonist to the President than a candidate outwardly far more brilliant. Lots of people will be very glad to get down to earth and to know what they may expect. And if they may expect something to which they are mentally habituated instead of the Utopian dreams of a collectivist civilization, all the better. They will feel that once more they are coming home. It will be like having a neighbor in the White House.

ANN MARSTERS IN HOLLYWOOD

Shirley's Dancing Lesson Is All Fun

The Boston Evening American presents herewith the ninth story in a series of intimate glimpses into the life of filmland's capital—"ANN MARSTERS IN HOLLYWOOD." Miss Marsters is being given entree to all of the studios, and is writing her stories from behind the scenes in the land of make-believe. These stories will appear daily.

By ANN MARSTERS

ANN MARSTERS
Shirley Temple, the wonder child, doesn't find life altogether a bed of roses. She told Ann Marsters about the one (to her) tragedy that invaded her sunshine existence in Hollywood.

SHIRLEY TEMPLE
"It's Daddy's birthday and I haven't finished his present," she said. She and her father are great pals—and he'll get the gift, a pen-wiper, even though it may be a few days late.

Hollywood, Calif., June 15—I watched Shirley Temple take a dancing lesson.

It gave me another delicious surprise that I hadn't expected. I had seen Shirley at work and at play on the set of her new picture in the 20th Century-Fox studio. I had been completely enthralled by her talent and sweetness. I thought I knew just how wonderful and adorable she was. Then came the dancing lesson . . .

Shirley was in the center of the big rehearsal room. Beside her was the famous tap dancer, Bill Robinson. They were going over one of the dance routines in Shirley's picture which will probably be called "Dimples."

The taps were coming surely and crisply from the soles of Shirley's tap shoes. Her tiny arms were swinging, and her whole body had become part of the swaying rhythm. She was dancing—and she was having so much fun doing it, that she couldn't keep the deep dimples from playing about her mouth. (I hadn't known that such a little girl could dance so well.)

Dimples, Smiles and Dance Genius

I was sitting on the sidelines with Mrs. Temple, and every now and then Shirley would toss her curls (as the music seemed to direct) and smile impishly at her mother.

"Shirley is just learning this routine," said Mrs. Temple. "She'll be able to do it much better later on."

But the speed with which Shirley learns her dances is a perpetual wonder to everyone—even to her mother, who is not one to think Shirley a genius merely because she's HER child.

Shirley faltered very seldom as I watched. When she did, Robinson would take her hand, they'd go over the step slowly, and then Shirley would swing into it with a world of confidence.

Once, to her immense delight, Robinson's taps varied from her own in the midst of a waltz-clog. Shirley stopped.

"No," she said, "that's not right, the way you're doing it. That step comes after we do the turn—don't you 'member?"

Perfect Hostess Puts Guest at Ease

A short rest was called. (I think it was Robinson who wanted to rest—not Shirley.) But anyway, Shirley had a visitor.

It was another child-actress, little Sybil Jason. The two had never met before, and Sybil arrived carrying a flower box, just about as tall as herself.

Shirley and Sybil shook hands, smiling politely at each other, and Sybil presented the big box. She watched intently as Shirley opened it and took out the long-stemmed pink roses.

Shirley thanked her, exclaimed about the roses, and ran to deposit them in her mother's lap. Then she called for a drink of water.

"Would you like one, too?" she asked quickly, turning to Sybil. Sybil nodded and Shirley called, "Bring another one for Sybil."

A minute later, Shirley established herself as "the perfect hostess." Because Sybil's glass was too full, she spilled a little on her dress—and Shirley said, comfortingly:

"That's all right. I often spill mine."

Shirley doing the "minstrel strut" made us all chuckle—as people chuckle over a kitten at play. Robinson has taught her to "truck" and she does it with all the zest of a Harlem entertainer.

Daddy's Birthday Her Big Worry

But all this while, there was something troubling Shirley—as I soon found out. Although you'd never have suspected it from her gay smiles, it had been preying heavily upon her mind. She told me about it while we were having our pictures taken, and the corners of her mouth held an infinite sadness.

"This is my daddy's birthday," she said, "and I didn't know about it until this morning. Today I have been trying to make him a present."

And haven't you finished it, Shirley?

"No," she said. "That's what's worrying me."

If you could have heard the way she said it, I'm sure it would have broken your heart. Shirley never talks baby talk. Her choice of words might strike you as being far beyond her 7 years—but when they are said with Shirley's voice, they immediately become a baby's words.

Now she is sincerely grieved because it is her father's birthday and she has no present to give him. In every spare moment she could snatch during the day, she has been making a pen-wiper for his desk.

"It won't take very LONG to finish it," she

'Taps' Sounded for Mayor Cookson

Worcester, June 15—Thousands of persons, heads bared and bowed, stood in the rain today as a bugler sounded "Taps" and the body of the late Mayor Walter J. Cookson was lowered into a Hope Cemetery grave

So large was the crowd at the doors of the municipal auditorium for the earlier services that it was estimated some 3000 had waited outside as the same number were admitted.

The Rev. William Smith of St. Matthew's Episcopal Church officiated at the auditorium services, with James A. Gow, organist of St. Matthew's, directing the music.

After this ceremony the flag-draped casket was borne to the hearse and a procession of several hundred automobiles followed along Main street to the cemetery.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Ann Marsters

Hollywood, Calif., June 15—NOTES ABOUT MOVIELAND: I don't like statistics any more than you do—but I have learned a lot of things out here and, since I must tell you a few, I can't escape putting in a figure or two.

The first is about the casting system in the studios. Aside from stars and featured players, more than 17,000 individuals have their names registered at the Central Casting Bureau for "bit" and "atmosphere" work in films.

ANN MARSTERS

The most popular types fall into 41 groups—such as: "Dress Men, Bellhops, Bald Men, Comics, Butlers, Beards, Riders, Policemen, Sea Dogs"—oh it goes on and on.

Many of these "types" are easily recognized as you walk along the streets of Hollywood—particularly "beards."

Property Department A World in Itself

The property department of a big studio is a whole world in itself. There are innumerable small departments that go to make up the whole—and especially amazing is what is called the "hand prop" department

This catalogues everything which can be moved with the hands alone. The list includes telephones, ink-wells, suitcases, crutches, pie plates, wax flowers, scissors—and so on into thousand upon thousand of different articles.

An enormous inventory must be kept—and if, for instance, a feather duster is required in a scene, that feather duster can be produced instantly.

A complete florist's shop is steadily functioning to provide fresh flowers for the various sets.

It's complicated work for the studio florist, because if a star is to wear a corsage in a scene, there must be at least a dozen exact copies of that corsage made ready.

It may take all day, perhaps two days, to complete a single sequence, and the flowers must be of the same freshness at all times. (They wilt so quickly under those lights.)

Jean Harlow Tires Of "Platinum" House

It was a very famous Hollywood house, done all in white, inside and out, even unto white rugs. And there may have been a time when Jean bemoaned the fact that the grass on her lawn couldn't be white also.

But now Jean has sold the house and moved to a new one in Beverly Hills. She is having the interior done over in soft, harmonizing colors.

President Grover Cleveland's widow, Mrs. Frances Preston, dropped in on the movie set on which her old friend, Lionel Barrymore, is working.

Barrymore was dressed in women's clothes for a scene in "The Devil Doll," a witchcraft story. And with a fine gesture, he gallantly tipped his wig to Mrs. Preston.

Ginger Rogers Will Solo in Next Picture

HEARD ABOUT HOLLYWOOD—Creighton Hale, Jack Mulhall, Frank Mayo, Albert Conti, and Bryant Washburn are all playing in "Hollywood Boulevard," a story whose theme is a once great film player whose sun declined . . . As soon as Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers finish "Never Gonna Dance," Ginger will do her first solo starring picture based on the novel "Summer Hall" by Valerie Savage . . . Having coffee in their portable dressing rooms is the latest craving of the stars. The mechanics on Barbara Stanwyck's set have presented her with an electric stove and a percolator . . . Author Hugh Walpole has left for England. He alternates half of each year back home and in Hollywood under his M-G-M writing contract. Paramount has the latest in stand-ins. The studio has engaged a common bull to act as stand-in for Cuddles, its prize bit of cow, now "acting" with Bing Crosby in "Rhythm on the Range."

AUSTEN LAKE

To the Slaughter:
Louis Will Kill
The Fatted Max

Napanoch, N. Y., June 15

I TRUST THAT MR. YUSSEL JACOBS, the fight manager, will have a large wash basket handy next Thursday evening to catch pieces of his man when Joe Louis begins to hack hunks off Max Schmeling at the Yankee Stadium. Because Max is going to come apart, either piece meal or all at once, and it would be messy to have bits of an anatomy cluttering the ringside rows.

Austen Lake

After viewing the body in this wilderness heaven, which is more of a Swiss model village than a fight camp, one is convinced that Max has less chance to survive this one than a loose goose on the streets of Harlem

The daily journals have been fed reports about Max' sleek body, his marble muscles and the electric whizz of his reflexes But as one who likes to find out what everybody else thinks and then think something different, I say he looks fat. Not portly, like a Boston city councilman. But with a thin film of middle aged suet under his skin, which won't wear off with exertion. And he looks slow with the ponderous muscularity of a blacksmith, jerking up the slack of his sinews before starting actual motion

If this antiquated optimist were fighting Jack Sharkey Thursday instead of Louis, I would feel compelled to choose Sharkey. The brutal fact is that Schmeling, four days before his final fight, looks less imposing than Max Baer did during his training period at Speculator, N. Y., last September, when a green kid named George Turner stuck his fighting mittens into Baer's face so often that the upholstery was moulded to the shape of Max' mask

* * *

A BLOND BOXER named Hans Kohlhaas climbed into the ring before the Sunday crowd and began hammering Schmeling's Gothic architecture with long lefts until the ridge of Max' left brow became swollen and inflamed. And Max merely skated around on the flat of his feet, pawing the air with his left hand and keeping his right cocked against his ribs, as a trapshooter holds a shotgun for a clay pigeon which never comes.

He was never an imaginative fighter in his prime, and now in his twilight there is no variety to his shots, which are on the poke-and-shuffle system as a kind of window dressing for his right hand. And when he explodes the big punch, he gives his all, coming off balance with its missed force and looking like Lefty Grove at the end of a pitch. And I fancy the first time he does this Thursday night, the ringside press section will be showered with souvenir teeth.

* * *

NEXT CAME a tatooed boxer named Mickey McAvoy, whose skin was arted up with nude portraits and sweetheart slogans. There was a design on his leg that looked like an Annheuser beer ad and another on his chest that resembled a picture on a cigar box. Being interested in his graphic arts, I had a good look at these later when he cooled off in the rubbing room.

Mickey was strictly a stooge with lots of sidewise and back, who slapped with open gloves like an infuriated girl and was convincing only for the clatter of his feet. He and Maxie did two rounds of a patticake rhumba with intervals of stomach quaking,

WILSON TOPS ALL EXPERTS

Ann Marsters' Hollywood Choices Add to Laurels

The Boston Evening American turf expert has a total of 79 winners to date for the combined Narragansett and Rockingham meets this year and this puts him ahead of all handicappers as usual.

In addition to the sparkling work of Wilson, Ann Marsters, New England's only girl handicapper, has also been clicking in top form with her daily selections which she wires from Hollywood each day.

Miss Marsters has shown a profit for the past three weeks and during the week which ended Saturday she had eight out of twelve winners but unfortunately one was disqualified.

Wilson has proved his ability since racing came to New England by continually topping all other selectors meeting after meeting.

NEW HURLING DEAL FOR SOX ANNOUNCED BY CRONIN

Grove, Ferrell, 'Osty', Marcum As Starters

Wilson, Walberg, Russell, Henry For Relief

By JOE CASHMAN

Syracuse, N. Y., June 15—Joseph Edward Cronin, who doubles in brass as manager and shortstop of the platinum-plated Red Sox, is nothing if not obliging.

The horde of war correspondents trailing along with the Fenway flock on this second western invasion were talking things over at breakfast.

'Tis a dull day for news, they decided, what with Grove, the Ferrells and the other battery stars traveling direct to Chicago and the rest of the gang having nothing more important to do than go through the motions of an exhibition game with the Syracuse farm hands this afternoon.

Then through the diner door strode the Cronin chap in person, looking as well-rested as though he had spent the night in his palatial Newton manse; his Irish eyes smiling but his lantern jaw at an angle that boded trouble for the hostiles that await out yonder.

Cronin Talks

"What's the news, gentleman?" he asked. (That "gentleman" didn't fool the boys. They knew it was for the benefit of the strangers in the car.)

"That's what we want to know as soon as you're finished with your cereal and eggs," he was told.

"The food can wait," he replied, "get your pencils and paper ready."

"The Sox," he began "will sink or swim in the West with Grove, Ferrell, Marcum and Ostermueller doing all the starting pitching. I feel the time has come to stop experimenting with Wilson, Henry and Walberg except for relief work. Jack Russell, who'll join us in Chicago tomorrow, will also be used only to finish up.

"If we have doubleheaders, I'll have to gamble on a second-stringer, of course, but the 'big four' will be worked in rotation, each starting every fourth day and none spending any time in the bull pen."

"Pitching remains my chief problem," he continued, "but I'm not worrying much about it. As I look at it, we're as strong in the box as any rival, even if we're not as strong as we'd like to be.

"Grove is the equal of any two pitchers on any other club. Ferrell is as effective as the best any rival can offer. Marcum and Ostermueller will win their share of games, even if they don't prove standouts.

"The swap of Cascarella for Russell can't possibly hurt and should help us a lot. Jack, delighted to be back in Boston, is sure to pitch his arm off for us and there's no smarter, steadier relief hurler in the business. The games he saved for me in Washington in 1933 won the pennant.

Ready for Top

"In short, I'm confident our pitching will be as good as any and better than most that we'll face.

"And if our punch lives up to expectations, I'm sure it won't take us long to fight our way to the top and stay there."

Our heroes, you see, haven't had a taste of competition since last Thursday, being rained out of the final three games of the series with the St. Louis Browns, and they're really thankful for this opportunity to tune up for the opener of a three-game engagement with the White Sox on the morrow.

Robert Moses Grove, who hasn't pitched since a week ago today and has been waiting impatiently since last Friday to step out in quest of his tenth victory, will start the new pitching rotation tomorrow. He'll be followed by Ferrell, Marcum and Ostermueller.

Long Race Season Starts at East Boston Track

By DAVE EGAN

Today is the day, my friends, and Suffolk Downs is the place.

There will be a bit of wagering, and no end of cuss wor[illegible], b[illegible] never forget that it is all for the improvement of the breed.

For the horses are moving in marching in to America's most lavish race track, there to loll about in the luxury of rustic barns, and English walking rings, and all the la-de-dah associated with modern race tracks.

Until Narragansett opened, horse racing was conducted on a simple plane. They took the horses out on a track, and bet on them, and watched them run, and the odds more often than not, were scratched up on a black-board, as nearly as they could be computed.

But Narragansett introduced the mechanical gadgets, such things as totalisator boards and counting rooms and cashiers who could be trusted and electric eyes so that the finishes would be right and now the whole thing is a complicated affair consisting of accountants who are eligible to receive jobs as lightning calculators when vaudeville comes back; electric conveniences which put the eyes of mere mortals to shame; and thoroughbreds which still win, place, show, or run out of the money.

Serious Business

Horse racing has become a very serious business to thousands of staid New England folks, which is why Dave Wilson's morning line and comment and selections are run in this paper, and which is also why there has been more head-scratching than at any similar period in the history of New England.

The confusion will reach new and tumultuous heights this afternoon in East Boston, for eight races are scheduled and anything can happen. The track is new; the horses are fresh; and they may run to form or not.

The feature race is entitled the Pilgrim Handicap. It will be a dash of six furlongs, for an added purse of $2500, and the starters will be, in the order of their post positions, Ladfield, Flamenco, Jair, Sobriety, Spixl, Miss Merriment, Speed to Spare, and Go Quick, a very nifty field of starters for an opening day.

Miss Merriment is one of the sprint stars of the nation Down in the metropolitan area, and by that I mean the softy tracks entitled Belmont, Jamaica, and Aqueduct, she is rated right up there with Sation, Clang, King Saxon, and Singing Wood.

Today, she will carry top weight of 112 pounds, which should not embarrass her and, in fact, should be right down her alley. In my private book, along with a lot of telephone numbers identified only by such strange names as Jacqueline, Esmeralda, and big Bessy, she is a four-to-five shot.

Likes 2 Horses

This must come as a boon to those who go against the Egan judgment. Through the years, the old Colonel has been consistently wrong in all departments, so I am hereby throwing a tow-rope to those who like Ladfield, or Jair, or Spixl, or the Vanderbilt hawses, or Go Quick, or even Flamenco.

Your envoy has a personal interest in only two horses in these United States of America, and they are, namely and to wit, Ra[illegible] and Flamenco

The loan sharks, who infest Boston, are still drinking to my health whenever they hear the name of Radiator, for was it not I who touted him the length and breadth and height of the building, and was it not I who put hundreds of honest persons in the bread-line from betting on Radiator? Yes, it was I, and if the loan sharks had a bit of human sympathy and a modicum of gratitude, they would start kicking in to this department, even at this late date. I mean to say that the boys are still paying off.

I was present, too, when Flamenco first arrived in this country, and I hailed him as a great English invader. Pardon me for becoming vindictive, but he has been as consistent a stinkeroo as Radiator. Possibly today will be the day for Flamenco, but if it should so happen that he wins, please do not think that I [illegible] part of the victory.

I gave up long ago. Two [illegible] is too much

Bees Start Home After Bad Trip

After a disastrous trip around the western circuit, the Bees are on their way east today from Chicago and will start a long stay at home with a four-game series with the St. Louis Cardinals.

There will be a single game with the Cards at the National League field tomorrow afternoon and a double header on the holiday.

The Cincinnati Reds are due here on Friday and will stay over the week end, after which the Bees will engage the Chicago Cubs in a four-game series and the Pittsburgh Pirates will be the last o[illegible] the western teams to put in [illegible]pearance

LOUIS SEEKS ONE-PUNCH K. O.

Mr. Boston

Louis Plays It Safe

—By JACK CONWAY—

LAKEWOOD, N. J., June 15—"Bomber" Joe Louis had completed his workout in the dining room of the Stanley Hotel here, and I went to the grill and bar on the ground floor.

Mr Boston

Louis' dressing rooms and those of his sparring partners lead off the grill. Some of the Bomber's admirers waited outside of the door of the corridor leading to the dressing rooms to get a peek at the 22 year old colored youth who will battle Max Schmeling at the Yankee Stadium on Thursday night.

I took a seat with members of the fourth estate at one of the tables in the grill. There was an orchestra playing, while people at the various tables were singing or talking in loud tones about the boxing ability of Louis.

There were not any racial lines drawn in the grill. There were both whites and colored folks in the place. On the edges of the grill there were half a dozen members of the New Jersey State police dolled up in their bright blue uniforms. They were members of Louis' personal guard.

Nobody here talks about kidnapers. It's felt J. Edgar Hoover and his G-men have taken care of that situation. Yet the Louis management and Mike Jacobs the promoter, believe in playing safe. There are always cranks and one of them might injure the "Brown Bomber" if he was not guarded. A fight promoter will go a long ways to protect a heavyweight who has a chance of drawing $10,000,000 during the next seven or eight years.

• • •

ETHEL WATERS

THERE ARE drum beats from the orchestra. It reminds me of the music of the jungle. Two colored dancers leap to their feet and give a stirring exhibition.

Joe Louis came into the grill during the height of the whirl [illegible]. He sat down at a table where Ethel Waters, stage star, and a party of friends are watching the show. After greeting those persons at the table Louis' eyes followed the two dancers. The jungle music predominated the place, and diners stood up to get a better view of the dancers. Restless feet kept time with the music.

The two dancers ended their act. Louis applauded. So did Ethel Waters and the members of her party.

There was a large white woman at one of the tables. Somebody in her party asked the manager to have her sing. One of the large woman's friends plays the piano.

"I am always asked to sing when I come to this place," said the large woman.

She then proceeded to prove she is a good singer.

Louis went into a huddle with those persons at his table. The orchestra leader was called over to the table and then returned to his place on the platform.

"Stormy Weather."

Louis' eyes were focused on the stage star.

The audience remained noticeably quiet as Ethel Waters sang. She received liberal applause when she finished. Louis probably forgot all about his coming bout with Max Schmeling as he joined in the applause.

• • •

HARLEM DANCE

A THIN, colored dancer was introduced. He danced and sang a song about what he called the "red Harlem." There was more jungle music, more beating of restless feet against the floor of the grill.

Louis, sitting in a chair at the edge of the dance floor, watched the feet of the dancer. Joe too, knows how to move his feet. His best step is a short shuffle. Thursday night he plans to shuffle close to Schmeling and knock him out with a savage punch to the jaw.

As Louis watched the wild Harlem dance, he probably forgot all about Schmeling. At heart he is still a boy, and he, too, would have been out there on the floor dancing if it were not for the fact he is getting ready for one of the most important fights of his career.

Louis did not eat like other members of his party. He would have dinner later, but the rules of training do not permit him to eat between meals. The "Bomber" can eat and drink mild beverages after his bout with Schmeling on Thursday night, but not until then. He will then also eat ice cream which is his favorite form of dissipation.

The maestro invited any other celebrities in the place to step on the floor and perform. A young colored boy accepted the invitation. He was introduced as a night club dancer. He did his dance in front of Joe Louis.

There was a man walking among the tables selling pictures of Joe Louis. There was a good sale for those pictures and Joe personally autographs each picture.

REACHES Peak for FIGHT

SET TO BLAST SCHMELING

By JACK CONWAY

Lakewood, N. J., June 15—The Joe Louis who will toss lethal punches at Max Schmeling in their 15-round bout at the Yankee Stadium on Thursday night is a better fighter than the "Brown Bomber" who knocked out Primo Carnera and Max Baer.

I watched Louis go through a brisk workout at the Stanley Hotel here, and he convinced me he will put up the greatest battle of his sensational ring career when he clashes with Schmeling.

Louis is as fast as he was when he stopped Carnera and Baer, while he is hitting every bit as hard. In addition he has attained greater ring poise and is more sure of himself when under fire. He can call his shots when working with his sparring partners.

The "Brown Bomber" weighed 201 pounds when he completed his workout before 500 persons in the crowded dining room where a ring is pitched. He [illegible] an [illegible]. He will probably lose a pound or two [illegible] at [illegible] which he will commence after his final workout on [illegible] day.

Enjoys Training

Louis' muscles are smooth and [illegible] dance on the surface of his well conditioned body. Joe moves easily and gracefully when in action. The spark of youth enables him to race through his gym drills. I think he enjoys the whole thing. Boxing is simple to him. Five or six years from now it may be hard, tedious work to get ready for an important match, but right now it is a grand lark.

Louis varies his right hand attack more than he did last fall against Baer. He punches steadily to the body and when his opponent drops his guard he lifts his smashes to the jaw. He shifts from the jaw to the body just as quickly.

The Louis left hand is as good as ever. The "Brown Bomber" has been told that Schmeling is easy to hit with a left hook to the jaw. He says he will find out for himself before the first round of Thursday night's bout is half over.

"I would like to see Joe knock Schmeling out with the first punch," Jack Blackburn told me. "I am taking the brakes off him in this fight. He cannot win too quickly for me. In Joe's other bouts, I have made him take it easy until he had a sure opening."

Louis listened to Blackburn's remarks, and then told me he felt he was sure to knock Schmeling out.

"That's good," said the "Brown Bomber." "It will be a good fight and there will not be any talk of broken hands when it is over. Carnera and Baer each had an excuse to offer for their defeat. With Schmeling admitting he is physicaly fit, he won't be able to offer an alibi when I knock him out."

"I am young, strong, can punch and box as Jack Blackburn has taught me," added Louis simply. "I think I can knock Schmeling out and then win the title from Jimmy Braddock."

I asked Louis what he would do to Braddock.

"I shall also knock Braddock out," he replied in a quiet, unassuming manner, much as he had told me he would stop Carnera and Baer.

Age Barrier Fails To Worry Braddock

TEUTON Can Beat LOUIS

TITLE HOLDER GIVES REASONS

By JAMES J. BRADDOCK

New York, June 15 (US)—They made me a 15 to 1 shot against Max Baer last June because I was 30 years old and Max was 26.

I beat Max, despite the difference in age.

Max Has Chance

I like Max's chances against Louis because of his fine condition. I'm not making my choice for the fight yet, but if it comes down to a matter of condition, I might just as well pick Max as the Bomber. Of course, good physical condition, alone, won't win fights, so I'll have to hold off picking the winner of this fight until the day of the fight.

Clubs Ruin Game of Dubs

One of the professionals touring the country with the winter "Flying Circus" was unable to get accommodations so he put up for the night in his golf bag. Woodie Platt, the Philadelphia amateur, who is well known for his wit, declared that they're not making clubs in hat sizes, for he claims he overheard one of his recent opponents ask a caddy for his 7½ iron.

WHICH Won That TITLE?

By BILL GRIMES

An all-time high for unique golf matches was staged yesterday afternoon when Leo Martin defeated his twin brother, Edward, 3-1, in the finals of the 44th Country Club Cup tournament.

Although they have been competing in junior, state amateur and New England championships for three years, the Martin twins never met in a major event until they reached the finals of The Country Club Cup.

Despite the heavy rain, the twins attracted the largest gallery to trail a Country Club Cup finals in many years.

Some of their close friends may not experience undue trouble distinguishing between the Martin twins but it's very difficult for casual acquaintances to be certain, which is which.

And that goes for the writer who has known them since they first entered the ranks of contenders for the state caddy championship.

Change Sweaters

[illegible] when Leo and Eddie arrived on the first tee yesterday afternoon wearing yellow sweaters, few in the gallery were able to tell them apart. And as a result it was suggested that they return to the locker room and put on different colored sweaters.

The Martin twins have a keen sense of humor and enjoy nothing more than taking somebody, who is not sure of their identity, for a ride.

And, they've taken me for many. Well do I recall an experience I had with the Martin twins, during the caddy championship at Commonwealth, while Leo was winning the title in 1932.

The twins were leading the field at the end of the morning round with Leo a stroke or two up on Eddie. Leo was the first twin to tee off in the afternoon and I made a note of that fact, for they were even more difficult to tell apart in those days than they are now.

Knowing that Leo was ahead of Eddie, it was with great assurance that I approached the first of the twins to arrive at the sixth tee where I was watching the play.

"How are you going, Leo?" I inquired.

"I'm Edward" was the reply.

Naturally, I still believed I was talking to Leo and that he was having a little fun at my expense. So, in order to show him that I was sure of my ground, I declared, "Leo was the first to tee off and you are the first here. So you must be Leo."

"You're wrong. I'm Edward. Somebody in Leo's threesome lost a ball on the fourth hole and we went through them."

Since the days when they were climbing for caddy championships the Martin twins have grown into young giants. They stand better than six-one and Eddie weighs about 185 and Leo some eight or nine pounds lighter.

Or is it the other way round?

However, regardless of which is which they are two great boys, who will make names for themselves both as golfers and in the world of business.

which needed only music and mutual thigh smacking to make a fine floor feature for the Como Club.

The final demonstration came when a straw-haired yokel named Jerry Johnson ducked under the ropes and began moving about with the grace of a waterfront bar bouncer, his dish-face more ludicrous for its look of fright. He caught everything that Max threw and could not have dodged a custard pie. And when it was over Max left the platform, stepping into the water bucket as he went and adding its liquid splash to the drip of rain on the roof.

BITING THE HAND, ETC.

PERHAPS I'M LIVERISH. But I thought I detected Johnny Risko, the veteran chopping block from Cleveland, who was among the distinguished gallery, holding his nose 'twixt thumb and forefinger like he sniffed whiffs of garbage. But I must have been mistaken about this, because later in the press chalet down the road Johnny said Max was the personification of male hardihood and in the velvet pink and he was hustling down to Broadway to cover some of Louis' sucker money before the Times square wisemen gobbled it all. And then Dr. William Walker, that celebrated medical authority who specializes for the state boxing commission, said the same thing. And who would doubt the learned physician?

I feel very mournful about writing this, particularly after having just risen from a Christmas dinner which the fight promoters provided for the news army which are living here in Orient luxury on the cuff. It was a seven-course dinner, with a fine assortment of long-necked and baby-dimpled bottles within hand reach of all. And pretty thoroughly soaked up by the visiting authors, too.

Joe Jacobs kept moving around with his cigar set at a battle angle and a plaid tam o' shanter over an ear, inviting everybody to have another little shock. And periodically, to set an example, Joe would have a little shock himself until he [illegible] not so much an executive in an expensive fight production [illegible] quaint character in Billy Watson's beef trust company [illegible] sky's Theater.

BEST BET—MISS MERRIMENT FIFTH RACE

Suffolk Downs, East Boston, June 15 — Victor Emanuel's Miss Merriment is highly fancied over six smart opponents in the $2500 added Pilgrim Handicap, six furlongs on a glittering opening day card here today.

FIRST RACE
Mr. Blaze, Hi Vic, Solar Time

MR. BLAZE third to No Dice, at Salem needs only [illegible] most recent [illegible] to graduate from the [illegible] tion should be furnished by HI VIC. The latter just missed drubbing Chickling in a Rockingham final. SOLAR TIME was heavily backed last out, may do better in this affair.

FIFTH RACE
Miss Merriment, Speed to Spare, Spixi

MISS MERRIMENT is nicely spotted at 112 pounds in this number. She [illegible] may to duplicate any one of her [illegible] New York races to grace the winner's circle. SPEED TO SPARE, on Rockingham form, shapes up as the main danger. SPIXI is a possibility on his last two Salem races.

SIXTH RACE
Synod, Sanctity, Mountainy Man

SYNOD'S last Agawam effort went for the well-known Mr. Sweeney. He outclassed a field of this sort and needs only to put forth a best effort to score. SANCTITY closed a world of ground in recent sprint endeavors at Rockingham. Should be well suited by the increased route. MOUNTAINY MAN, if up to a race, could take the whole pot.

SEVENTH RACE
FLAXEN, JEAN BROWN, DORMIDO

FLAXEN turned in a most creditable performance in a recent sprint at Rockingham and is coming up dead fit in the seventh race, which is a substitute for the race originally carded. In with a feather and always good in the heavy going, FLAXEN should lead this field home. JEAN BROWN, winner up at the New Hampshire track, will probably offer the contention. DORMIDO, yet to show anything promising, should take the show.

Louis Plans to Stop Max With 1 Punch

PEEVED AT REMARKS OF GERMAN

Lakewood, N. J., June 15 (INS)—"Pictures or no pictures I'm goin' to flatten him just as quick as I can."

This is Joe Louis' reply to the [illegible] that he might carry Max Schmeling along for a few rounds to increase the value of the moving pictures of which he will get 30 per cent.

"Let me tell you something," said Joe indignantly, "I ain't never carried nobody and I ain't going to start now."

"I got plenty of money right now and I'll get more for this fight. If the pictures make me some more, that's fine. But if they don't, it don't make no difference. If I can stop him with one punch, I'm going to."

This seemed to bode no good for Max. He didn't, by any chance, have any personal feelings against Max, did he?

"Oh, no, I never have no feelings about any of the boys I fight, but I was a little peeved about some of those remarks Max Baer made before our fight, and that Natie Brown sorta got my goat sticking his head outside the ropes instead of fighting like he oughta."

Then he never carried any grudge into the ring?

"Nope, why should I? It's just business with me."

Well, supposing Max should knock him down, what then?

"All right," said Joe, "what of it? I could get up, couldn't I? I was flattened seven times in my first amateur fight and I got up every time. Where do they get that stuff that I can't take it?"

"Let me tell you something else. An amateur has to take more beating than a pro because he don't know anything. I bet I took more when I was boxing for medals than I ever will have to take fighting for dough. I took ten times more punishment in my first amateur fight than I took in all my professional fights put together."

[illegible]

"I don't know just what to tell you about that, but I guess when I knock out a man I may be feeling like Hank Greenberg does when he knocks a homer for the Tigers. You know, he ain't got nothing against the pitcher and he don't want to hurt him none, but he does want to win the ball game. Well, that's about the way it is with me in the fights. The quicker I knock them out, the less they have to take."

"One more question, Joe, what about the other camp's squawk over bandages?"

"Say," answered Joe, "I don't care if we fight with bare hands. Whatever the other fellow wants is all right with me. Whenever Chappie here (that's his pet name for Blackburn) says 'let's go to town,' I'm going, gloves or no gloves."

Mr. Schmeling, please take note.

Twenty Sparring Mates Used by Louis

Lakewood, N. J., June 15 (INS)—When Joe Louis takes his last stiff workout today for his fight with Max Schmeling he will have made a record for the number of sparring partners used during a training siege.

Twenty human guinea pigs have sampled Dr. Louis' pruning hands and the cost to Joe is estimated at $10,000, which includes their pay, room and board for five weeks' work.

Cleveland Signs Cambridge Boy

He is due to hurl his first big league game in an exhibition at Scranton, Penn., today.

Young Anderson was a star pitcher during his days at Cambridge Latin and last year at Kents Hill. He was ready to enter [illegible] fall until the Indians signed him.

Recently he pitched for the Cottage Crest Club, winners in the first half of the Suburban Twi League. He chalked up five wins and no defeats.

TITLE HINGES ON HARVARD-YALE SERIES

Hambone

Dusted Off for Display

By DAVE EGAN

There have been some minor squawks about this column, like words being misspelled and not knowing what I am writing about, but natcherally, I laugh these off, because the dopes who right in do not know what they are righting about.

But when a screech issues from the little lady (known in our own set as the meat axe) that there is no sex appeal in the column, natcherally I begin to think about Carole Lombard which is a phony name whichever way you take it and Jean Harlow and then little by little I get down to Joseph Kelly, the Hambone.

Now I have not seen the Hambone in two years, coming this Friday, and I do not know what he is doing, but I will be willing to bet a pound, if I have a pound, that he is tending bar in the neighborhood of South Boston and will be glad to see me if I lay off of the high hat for a few days and go calling on my neighbors in southern Boston.

Joseph, the Hambone and I were always friends of the firmest sort, for I always looked like a sissy and the Hambone was always daring anybody in the house to call me a sissy, which gave me a feeling of importance for the Hambone would always sit anybody down who even started a sound like "s-s-s."

It was Hambone who asked me one certain night up in the Arena when he was to don the gloves a few minutes later to please write his "hysterical antidotes," and not to forget the address on Broadway, South Boston, where the congregation was to meet later in the evening for beerage and breakage.

And I suppose it was the mighty Hambone who made the classic crack of the past decade and you might as well know about the crack here and also now.

Brain Work

J. Hambone Kelly wished to join the Elks, or somebody wished him to join the Elks, and they handed the mighty one an application blank.

"Here is where you are sunk, Joe," they said to him.

"I have been sunk in lots of places," said Joe the Hambone, "but I will not be sunk here. What is the matter?"

"This is the matter," they said, and they pointed to a question which read, "Do you believe in a divine being?"

They insinuated that he could not answer the question.

"Haw!" said Hambone, "that's easy. D'ya think I'm an amethyst?"

And from there my fragrant thoughts (ed note: he means vagrant thoughts) natcherally flit to the business of fist-fighting, and the absence of such colorful figures as J. Hambone Kelly in the boxing industry.

Two fellows named Sharkey and Brubaker are going to square off here next week, and a couple of sanctimonious persons named Louis and Schmeling are going to assume fighting postures in New York this week, but it is strictly a business with all concerned, and they will take their money and put it in a bank and everything will be very quiet the morning after the fight and nobody will be injured.

They will not do like J. Hambone did the morning after he fought Paul Berlenbach and all but knocked him stiff. J. Hambone deposited his $3800 in the finest bank in the town at nine in the morning, returned at 9.30 with a few assorted bums to withdraw $500, made another appearance at 10.15 for $1000, accompanied by a score of dirty fellows; and brought the boys in the back room with him when he appeared at 11 o'clock seeking a few hundred in cash.

When he arrived at 12 noon, surrounded by a horde of smelly persons, they handed him his balance and asked him, please, to keep out of their bank.

Which is my idea of sex appeal and if the little lady, or meat-axe, does not agree, I will invite J. Hambone Kelly over to our house to have a talk with her.

WEATHER Balks Danno AND ROBERT

A slow and lazy rain forced those who run the Rocky Hill [illegible] champions training quarters and the White Spot, Robert's conditioning spot, to put off the [illegible] game sign.

The first verbal outburst since the two established training camps happened today, when promoters in charge of the show tried to get one to work at 2 p. m. and the other at 4 p. m. so everybody could sit in at the drills. Danno refused the late date. So did Robert.

"Let Robert work at 4 p. m." Danno said. "He's the challenger and I'm the champion, and I should be able to dictate all terms."

"Let Danno take the late date," Robert said. "He may be champion, but not in my book. I have beaten him twice in Boston and once in Holyoke, but the referee didn't see it that way."

Danno is taking his training in a serious frame of mind. He has Charley Webb, John Malmberg and Joe Kayot, three pretty tough hombres, drilling with him.

Robert also is going through extra paces in conditioning. He has Arthur LeGrand and John Spellman doing their stunts with him.

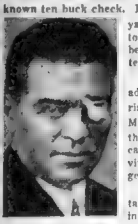
Crash in the Night

Frank Harris of Braintree Faces Death in Dark Hour Before Dawn

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

FRANK G. HARRIS, of 100 Cabot avenue, Braintree, is today's Distinguished Adventurer and winner of the well-known ten buck check. Frank brings us a rip-roaring thrill yarn of an experience that happened to him, he says, in the dark hour just before dawn, on the night of September 26, 1929.



FLOYD GIBBONS

That's the traditional hour for adventure—that last hour before the rising sun starts to grey the sky. More people get into trouble then, than any other time of the day, because it's the part of the night when vitality is at its lowest ebb and men get careless and make mistakes.

But it wasn't through any mistake of Frank's that he ran smack into adventure, and it wasn't because his vitality was low either. Frank was right on his toes all through his terrifying mishap. If he hadn't been, I'm pretty doggone sure he wouldn't be sitting here telling us about it now.

For 12 years, Frank had been a railroad fireman, and never once in that time had the perils of his trade touched him. But there's always an end to any run of luck, and Frank's ran out that chill September night in a crash of buckling metal and a roar of hot, hissing steam

He was running a switch engine over the tracks of the South Boston Freight Terminal when suddenly the engine trembled and shook from end to end. There followed a deafening roar—the noise of tearing steel and snapping bolts. One corner of the engine cab had struck a loaded freight car which, having been improperly secured on a siding, had rolled down and stopped part way across the main track.

Dark hour or no dark hour, Frank knew what to do in an emergency At the first shock, he dived head first through the cab window. He was just a fraction of a second too late Even as his body was going through it, the window buckled as heavy steel plates collapsed like an accordion catching Franks feet—HOLDING THEM PINNED IN A VISE-LIKE GRIP between the boiler and the wreckage of the crumbling cab.

It left Frank hanging head downward along the side of the engine. Maybe, to the average man that wouldn't look so tough, but Frank knew enough about train wrecks to realize that his chances of ever getting out alive were so slim that they were hardly worth counting.

"I just waited for the end," he says, "and tried to get used to the idea of dying. My chief regret was that I would never again see my wife and children.

"In the next second things began to happen. A splash of boiling hot water struck my legs and ran down my back. A spray of live steam shot out and scorched my face. This was different from the blow on the head or the broken back which I had expected would end my life.

"The pain of the scalding water was terrible and I thrashed and kicked in agony and desperation. Then I felt one foot move a bit in the wedge of crumpled iron that held it."

Frank kicked again The foot came loose. The other one came through right after it He fell head first to the ground, hitting his skull on a wooden tie, but Frank says that tie was soft in comparison to the steel rail he had expected to land on

The blow knocked him unconscious for a few moments. "The next thing I remember," he says, "is crawling across the ground on my hands and knees trying to get away from the smashed engine and its roaring steam pipes. I seemed to be all right again, and got up on my feet."

The next thing Frank thought of was the engineer He started to walk around the engine to see what had happened to him. He came upon him on the other side of the track, talking to the yardmaster and a couple of men from the train crew.

He had jumped out the other window when the crash came, and now he was saying, "Poor Frank—a swell guy. Darned shame he had to be killed like that."

And just then Frank walked into the middle of the group and touched the yardmaster on the arm

The yardmaster looked at him—and jumped a foot in the air. Frank grinned at his surprise. Then, suddenly, he let out a shriek. Up to that minute he had felt dazed—numb. If he had been in pain, the excitement of the moment had made him forget it. But now the reaction set in. He collapsed at the yardmaster's feet, screaming for an ambulance.

Frank was still screaming and moaning when, fifteen minutes later, the ambulance rolled into the yard. His cries didn't stop until he reached the hospital and an attendant shot him full of opiate with a hypodermic needle

Frank says he spent three weeks in that hospital and had the best care he ever had in his life given to him by the loveliest bunch of nurses he ever saw

But—and here's what I've got against Frank, doggone his hide—he doesn't say what hospital it was. Can you imagine a guy who calls himself an adventurer leaving out an important detail like a hospital full of pretty nurses?

WHAT DO YOU SAY, BOYS AND GIRLS—DO WE LET FRANK INTO THE CLUB NOW, OR DO WE MAKE HIM WAIT TILL HE COMES ACROSS WITH THE LOW-DOWN?

Hall Johnson Choir In New Film Series

Los Angeles, June 15—The Hall Johnson Choir, whose spirituals so enchanted everyone who heard them in "Hearts Divided" and in "The Green Pastures," is returning to Hollywood to make a series of religious featurettes.

Louella O. Parsons

The idea [illegible] as if it were an imitation, [illegible] scale, of Marc [illegible] famous play although RKO says their conception of Biblical subjects bears no relation to the "Green Pastures" ep[illegible]

Nevertheless, "Samson and Delilah," "Daniel in the Lion's Den," "Jonah and the Whale" and "David and Goliath" as seen through colored eyes, [illegible] reminiscent of [illegible] Pastures." Th[illegible] as singing will [illegible] by the members of [illegible] Negro choir.

And that [illegible] job three or four of [illegible] known leading men have been seeking. This [illegible] drama was a tremendous success when it was produced in New York some ten or more years ago, and it's still modern [illegible] to make it one of [illegible] most important 1936 offer[illegible]

After being on the RKO [illegible] for days and [illegible] to make an appointment, Patricia Wilder became a [illegible] annoyed. So she sent a telegram to Sam Briskin saying, "Who do you think you are, Zanuck?" and now Honey Chile Wilder has a nice role in "Smart Pete," opposite Gene Raymond and Sothern and Henry Stephenson.

Only three brief years ago Carleton E. Morse did his best to sell his script of "One Man's Family" to the movies for $100. He couldn't get so much as a nibble or a smoke. Since that time his story of family life has become famous on the air, and now Paramount is reported to have paid $[illegible] for what once could have been bought for a fraction of the sum. Morse will write his own screen play and the cast will consist of well known [illegible] stars.

Chatter in Hollywood: The [illegible] for the new Carole Lombard-William Powell comedy, "My Man Godfrey," bring [illegible] how superstitious [illegible] was about this film. It was [illegible] he was [illegible] before it was finished. He felt it would [illegible] be one of the best comedies ever made—or one of the worst. Well, the [illegible] with which it was [illegible] at [illegible] it is one of the best yet produced.

Victor McLaglen moves over to [illegible] today to begin work on [illegible] story widely publicized as a [illegible] yarn of the steel [illegible]. And the [illegible] which [illegible] seems to have taken a new lease on life and is planning productions on a wholesale scale, [illegible] Pete [illegible] for the [illegible] one of [illegible] fame, [illegible] Nan Grey, is set for a supporting [illegible].

~~said~~, and turned to her mother. "Couldn't I finish it before we go home?"

Daddy Tucks Her Into Bed Each Night

"There won't be any time for that, Shirley," said her mother. "You aren't through with your dancing lesson yet."

"But, mother, it will only take fifteen minutes."

Mrs. Temple was firm—and Shirley was on the verge of whimpering. She took a quick glance at her mother's face, and she knew that it wasn't going to do any good. So, instead of crying, she went to the piano to rehearse a song. Once more her face was all dimples and smiles.

"Shirley adores her father," said Mrs. Temple, smiling at the back of Shirley's golden head. "She always looks forward to the evenings, when she can be with him—and I know he wouldn't miss those evenings for anything in the world.

"After dinner he takes her on his lap and reads to her, or else Shirley draws pictures for him with her crayons. When it's time for bed, he always gives Shirley her bath and tucks her in."

Father Temple Foots the Bills

It was a little peek into the life of the Temple family—and it was a typical one. There is no nurse-maid for Shirley, no string of servants to wait upon the Temples. With the exception of a single maid, Mrs. Temple still runs her home and cares for Shirley. Their little girl's great good fortune and wealth has not changed the Temples' ideas or their mode of living.

What Shirley earns is hers. That is their attitude, and her father is saving her income for her, putting some of it in sound investments. Only Shirley's personal expenses are taken out. The rest of the family live on what Mr. and Mrs. Temple earn.

The "rest" include Shirley's two brothers, who are away at school. They are Jack, 17, and George, Jr., 14

The Temples' home is not large, and not at all elaborately furnished. There is a high white wall around the yard in which Shirley plays—but it is too small a yard for the pony she is so anxious to have.

I saw the bungalow, later, when Shirley had finished rehearsing and went to put on her "going home" dress.

It is a very pretty little house, with a slanting roof, and flowers and a hedge encircling the yard. There is a swing and a slide in the yard, and several boxes for Shirley's beloved rabbits.

In Her Own Little House on the Lot

Shirley is particularly proud of the kitchenette with its diminutive electric stove and refrigerator. All her luncheons are cooked here, for Mrs. Temple feels it is better to keep Shirley away from the studio cafe where there are far too many people who want to flatter and love her.

But Shirley is used to flattery—and it bores her (although she is too polite to say so).

"She never looks in a mirror. She isn't even interested in looking at pictures of herself. She likes to be dressed prettily, but she doesn't get particularly excited over a new dress, as most little girls do."

Good-bye With A Brave Smile

She walked a little sadly to the car that was waiting for her and her mother, and I knew she was thinking that she hadn't finished the pen-wiper, that it was her father's birthday and she had no present to take him.

It made me feel sad, too—but suddenly she turned, showing me her dimples at their deepest and her eyes at their brightest.

ST. APPOLONIA GUILDS INVITED

The Federated Guilds of St. Appolonia, composed of leading Catholic dentists of the United States and Canada and of which Cardinal O'Connell is the honorary president, have been invited to affiliate with the National Association of Catholic Hospitals in its annual convention in Baltimore, June 15 to 18. This has been announced by Dr. Thomas J. Giblin, 476 Commonwealth avenue, chairman of the Federated Guilds and treasurer of the Boston Guild.

Delegates from the Boston Guild, in addition to Dr. Giblin, are Right Reverend Monsignor M. J. Splaine, spiritual director of the guild; Dr. R. J. Larkin, president of the Boston Guild, and Dr. S. A. Sullivan, delegate. The delegation left for Baltimore last night.

The Guild of St. Apollonia was started in Boston in 1920, and today there are 15 guilds in the United States and Canada with a total membership of 3000. The Boston Guild has 300 members.

New Deal Foes on Screen

The big G. O. P. show in Cleveland reaches a speedy climax, and Hearst Metrotone News records the proceedings from a ringside seat. National Chairman Fletcher opens the show as 2006 delegates and alternates pack the huge auditorium, and Senator Stiewer of Oregon delivers the keynote speech, after which Representative Snell of New York becomes permanent chairman. All have a disparaging word for the New Deal and the great American quadrennial institution is on again.

In Miami William B Leeds, heir to tin plate millions puts into port with his bride a former telephone operator whom he saved from drowning. At Sailing Baruch's home they have a parson retie the knot, a ceremony already having been held at sea, and society guests bid them Godspeed as they resume their honeymoon aboard the yacht Moana.

In Italy Mussolini tactfully keeps out of sight as all Naples acclaims King Victor Emmanuel, new Emperor of the Italian Empire, on the occasion of the unveiling of a monument to Marshal Diaz, leader of the Italian forces in the World War.

And as France is torn by internal economic strife 50,000 Catholics sound a peaceful note by reaffirming their faith in a mammoth mass celebrated by the American Cardinal, Denis Dougherty. Several other Princes of the church assist.

HANEY ON BUSINESS

Gradual Recovery
MOVEMENT IS EXTENDED
As Volume Grows

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, June 15—The stock market last week merely continued and extended the gradual irregular recovery movement that has been going on since the end of April. The averages closed on Saturday 2 to 3 points higher than at the end of the preceding week.

Furthermore, the volume of trading was larger. Last week over five million shares were bought and sold, against only three million eight hundred thousand the week before.

* * *

Activity was mostly on the up side. Eleven of the twelve stocks that were most active during the week showed gains. Among these, the utilities were most notable, including Consolidated Edison (up 3 points), Columbia Gas and Electric, Electric Power and Light, United Corporation and Commonwealth and Southern. The store stocks came second, with Gimbel the leader in activity. But perhaps as notable is the fact that two of the "pivotal" in industrials were strong and active for both U. S. Steel and General Motors rose 3 1-3 points during the week on considerable volume.

On the whole, I would say that the better grade of industrial leaders made good showing, and that this is a favorable symptom.

The strength in the utilities doubtless comes from rising hope that political developments are making for a fairer treatment of business enterprise, and less injection of politics into business.

* * *

Underneath all is the growing realization that there is a real chance to cast off that economic nightmare, the New Deal, and to restore that condition of equal rights for all individuals according to their abilities which is the foundation of American democracy.

The Republican party is being virtually reorganized. It will stand for some things that are not pleasing to "big business." We can be fairly sure, however, that a Landon victory would free us from the mixture of parlor Socialism, money juggling and waste which has retarded industry and employment for three long years. This thought is not going to hurt investment stocks!

* * *

But the long-term threat that the New Dealers may deal their way into office again, remains. There are also three nearby threats, namely the reconvening of Congress, which brings up the possibility of a bad tax, the Franc devaluation threat, and the credit-tightening threat. These are enough to restrain bullishness for a while. Are these enough to prevent a further rise, or to cause any severe reaction?

I do not thing so. They are either very uncertain, or remote, or already discounted. As to the proposal to increase reserve requirements 25 per cent, that would still leave over two billion dollars in excess reserves!

At the very least, one can say that there is nowhere any definite indication or reason why the stock market may not go higher. Even the "Dow theory" followers, with their mechanical notions, merely say that there is no "signal." But the fact is that the averages have been making a clear cut upward "path" for six weeks. Successive tops and bottoms have both been higher.

There is plenty of idle money, while bond yields and interest rates are low, and earnings and dividends are in many cases showing improvement.

Thus, while a period of "digestion" and some irregularity would be natural here, I can see no reason to disturb intermediate or long pull positions, and believe that a policy of selective buying during minor reaction is advisable.

COTTON
Position
BETTER
BUYING SIDE ACTIVE

By BERNARD S. O'HARA
Associated Press Financial Writer

New York, June 15 — With its recent crop fears calmed to some extent, the cotton market looked to other factors last week and received sufficient inspiration to add another $1.50 or so a bale to the gains of the past few weeks.

In Wall Street cotton commission houses it was said that further improvement in the statistical position, resumption of active buying in cloth, and re-entry into the market by some of the speculative forces which had been idle for a year or more largely accounted for the extension of the bullish movement.

The old crop July delivery had only a moderate participation in the upward movement, showing a net gain of 35 cents a bale. In the new crop positions the rise ranged from $1.45 to $1.70 a bale as compared with the final levels of June 6.

It appeared that the buying side began to attract a sizable following, including a considerable amount of trade price-fixing, when values held their ground in the face of helpful showers over much of the eastern belt territory recently in the grip of a severe drought.

* * *

Official and private weather reports indicated a considerable easing of the situation, in the east, although fears continued that the long siege of dryness had wrought irreparable damage in certain areas.

It was understood in trade circles that the producers' pool continued to sell substantial quantities of July futures, but the pressure had little or no effect on the old crop contracts. Merchants, mills and traders, it was said, were willing to buy the new crop deliveries on a rising market on the basis of prospects for larger consumption and, possibly, smaller supplies.

The week's developments in the manufacturing division engendered fresh optimism in all branches of the trade since they indicated a demand for cloth exceeding by a considerable margin the mill output.

Official circles reported that American cotton continued to move to domestic mills in larger volume than at this time last year, with the flow to foreign manufacturers holding about even.

Forwardings to domestic spinners for the past four weeks were estimated at 387,000 bales, against 306,000 for the corresponding period last year. The foreign shipments for the same time were 454,000, against 455,000.

BULL
KNOWN

By BROADAN WALL
Universal Service

New York, June 15 — Everybody interested in stocks seems to know the bull factors.

2—The vast sum of "idle money."

4—Foreigners must keep capital here for safety and some of this finds its way into our securities.

5—Inflation.

Perhaps the only indisputable item in the above list is the last. People are getting optimistic that higher prices are coming.

Business is only fair if compared with the level of stock prices. Stocks have been discounting much bigger profits than those actually reported so far.

* * *

The bonus has given the market its latest inspiration. The distribution was voted a half-year back and the market had all this intermediate period to discount the benefits of the bonus.

True, the bonus has stimulated business somewhat. Retailers in particular have been enjoying a rapid expansion in sales. The effect of the bonus, however, has been exaggerated and this is particularly notable in the rapid rise of installment buying. Some observers say the increase in installment buying has been at the fastest rate in history.

Furthermore, such buying power as the bonus affords is wholly created out of government credit. Aside from this the administration has lately steered away from new inflation. Indeed, as the election campaign shapes up, the candidates will compete in promising economy. Thus inflation cannot be considered an immediate inspiration for stocks.

* * *

Any attempt to create cheer out of the foreign situations destined to failure. It is simple arithmetic that as foreign countries cheapen their money, it becomes that much cheaper to buy their merchandise. As the gold-bloc devalues, therefore, American industry will find increased competition in world markets—and also in the domestic market.

If stocks were selling at low price-to-earnings ratios the overhanging situation might have little influence pricewise. With stocks at high levels, however, the constructive forces are offset by the bearish factors.

Cotton Conditions

Most of the cotton belt is sending in favorable crop accounts, although complaints of drouth are still coming from points in the Carolinas, Georgia and Arkansas. Recent showers have greatly reduced the dry areas. The demand for labor for chopping has increased greatly this week.

Rayon Use Expanded

In fact, consumption of this synthetic fibre has been increasing at the rate of 28 per cent for the past 15 years.

The others have been declining, with the exception of wool, which showed a large gain in 1935.

At present the proportion of rayon consumption to the total textile fibres is about 7.3 per cent. Cotton fibre consumption alone is more than 11 times as large as rayon consumption. Rayon prices per pound, however, are more than five times that of raw cotton.

In 1929 the knit goods industry took 53 per cent of the total rayon output. The woven goods industries consumed 42 per cent.

In 1935 the position was reversed. The weaving industries took 73 per cent of rayon output, whereas the knit goods took only 25 per cent. The woven goods trade is more important on a poundage basis than the knit goods.

The Census of Manufacturers show that in 1929 the total poundage of cotton, silk and rayon consumed in the woven goods industry was 3,802,000,000 pounds, as compared with 341,000,000 pounds of these fibres in the knit goods industry.

SALES GAIN
Production Above 1935

With nearly all divisions at the most active pace since 1930, the furniture industry is continuing for the third successive year its record of uninterrupted expansion.

Reports from all parts of the country reveal that thousands of homes are being refurnished, and some completely outfitted, making the average individual purchase the largest it has been since 1929.

This already has lifted retail sales 15 to 25 per cent from the 1935 total, although the peak selling period this year is not expected to be reached until late summer or early fall.

As retailers' stocks are low, orders to wholesalers have ranged from 20 to 40 per cent more than a year ago, and numerous delivery delays have been encountered. In view of this improvement, upward revisions have been made of the possible 1936 output.

Based on the estimate of Seidman & Seidman, which placed 1935 production at $320,000,000, the value of the goods turned out in 1936 is expected to reach $448,000,000.

This estimate may be exceeded, as a survey made by the American Legion indicated that more than $61,000,000 of the veterans' bonus money will be spent for furniture during the early summer.

While the financial position of both retailers and manufacturers has been strengthened during the last two years, distribution has increased at a faster rate than profits.

This is attributed to the continued low prices, which have kept many plants operating at a loss, according to a survey of the furniture industry, which has just been completed by Dunn & Bradstreet, Inc.

Starting the year with operations more than 50 per cent higher than at the beginning of 1935, manufacturers of furniture produced 30 to 35 per cent more furniture during the first four months of 1936 than in the comparable 1935 period, despite a lowering of schedules in February.

Orders booked for the first quarter, according to Seidman & Seidman, were 25 per cent larger than in 1935, reaching the highest first quarter total since 1930. March orders alone showed an increase of 32 per cent.

This improvement followed gains of 40 to 50 per cent in furniture production in 1935 over the 1934 total, which exceeded the annual figures since 1931.

With the orders now in hand, manufacturers have planned to make monthly upward revisions in schedules during the summer. Due to the delivery delays last fall and their greater confidence in continued expansion of consumer demand, wholesalers have started to stock three or four months ahead for the first time in five years.

With the exception of July, 1935, when the rate was under the corresponding position of 1933, household furniture plant operations for all districts during every month in 1935 and thus far in 1936 were higher than for the comparative periods of both 1934 and 1933.

TRADE
GAINS
15 P. C. AHEAD OF LAST YEAR

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
Copyright, 1936, Universal Service

New York, June 15 — Business holds steady at the approach of summer, and the net overall result for the first half year will doubtless be the best since 1930.

Volume appears to be running about 15 per cent ahead of last year.

Financial and business attention has been focussed on politics, and there may be some disposition to overvalue the political influence. Meantime, business is protected against political scares and seasonal recession by the temporary constructive effect on buying power of payment of the soldiers' bonus and belated distribution of farm benefit checks.

The inordinate business interest in politics this year springs in part from the fact that much of the New Deal programme dealt with economic matters. The administration felt a responsibility for expanding buying power and for planning the economic trend. Moreover, under the New Deal, there has been considerable business baiting, and other business fears have developed as a result of prodigal Federal spending and rising taxes.

Accordingly, the investing and enterprising classes have been especially sensitive to the factor of political risk, and there is therefore a widespread belief that on the election will turn numerous issues of importance to prosperity makers and profit seekers. For example, a political change would be interpreted marketwise as a bullish factor relating to the public utility group, which has been in especial disfavor during the last three years.

Likewise, the opposition platform deals primarily with economic issues, and in the circumstances it is futile to expect business men and investors to hold themselves aloof from politics. The big question is the extent that employers may properly participate in the campaign, and the limits of propriety in seeking to influence the decisions of employes.

From my viewpoint it would a fundamental mistake for em ers to attempt directly or indire ly to dictate to workers. On t other hand, it would be right fo employers to make available workers honest factual data, w would show the bearing of ing economic controversies on p pects for employment and business volume.

Such interchange, however, must be made as between equals, with ful recognition on both sides of the indispensable right of each to follow without coercion or intimidation the dictates of their [illegible] conscience.

In business the encouraging sign is the continued improvement in the hitherto laggard heavy industries, such as steel, tractors, railroad equipment and building.

Although politicians continue to quarrel with chain stores, consumers appear to be sanctioning their activities with greater patronage than before. Some conspicuous chains reported the best May in their history. Likewise, variety chains reported an increase of 15 per cent over May, 1935.

Apparently, consumers, desiring to stretch their buying power, like scientific, economical merchandising, and show their preference by exercising their options at the counters where merchandise is offered. Much of the political opposition to chains springs from inefficient merchants, who have been unable to meet the competition. On the other hand, efficient individual merchants, through voluntary chains and through improved methods, have been able to thrive alongside of the multiple store competition.

In this connection, the political talk about monopolies needs to be thoroughly analysed. A distinction must be made between monopolies, on the one hand, and concentration of economic power, on the other. In the low-priced automobile field, for example, there has been great concentration, with three companies dominating the field, yet there has been most intense competition among them.

EXTENDS SOO Line's RFC Loan

The ICC has approved extension until July 1, 1938, of RFC loan of $5,000,000 to Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie Railway Co. due August 1. The commission ruled that the road is not at this time in need of financial reorganization.

At the same time, the commission approved extension from August 1, 1936, to February 1, 1938, the maturity of $5,000,000 of secured notes of Soo Line with rate of interest reduced from 6 per cent to 5 per cent.

The road was authorized to continue repledge of $6,250,000 of first refunding mortgage bonds, Series B, as collateral security for the notes.

BONUS MONEY

Veterans WARNED BY Bankers

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Veterans beware of the get-rich-quick racketeer. That is the substance of the warning of savings bankers who see all sorts of gilt and tinsel plans calculated to separate veterans from their hard-won bonus.

Carl M. Spencer of Boston, president of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks and of the Home Savings Bank, says the fight for the bonus dollar is going to be a hot one.

Veterans will be besieged to invest their money in fly-by-night schemes Mr. Spencer says, adding that bankers have been advised for months that unscrupulous organizations have been placing their names on sucker lists. Veterans must not only build up their resistance to the plausible arguments of the high pressure boys, but they must exercise the ordinary caution of any investor. Investigate first. See a reliable banker or broker; check up on the enticing scheme. And above all do not hand over the money until this is done. Then if it is a sound, clean proposition, make sure the transaction is put through by well known, established organizations of high moral character.

The current bulletin of the Cleveland Trust Company contains a study of election year stock market movements sure to attract widespread attention in speculative and investment circles. Using a graph of the average movement in 26 election years, Colonel Ayres makes a most searching study of such markets. And the result is the graph not only shows a decline from April to June, but also shows a rising trend from mid-June until around the end of the year. Thus those who argue that buying time is either here or not far away will find unexpected support for their ideas and can be counted on to work all the harder to put them across.

Chart Picture: Johns Manville has not rallied well since touching 88 flat in May . . . Yet the stock looks as though it were well placed for a comeback . . . Our charts on Manville suggest the failure to rally more strongly is not due to persistent selling . . . Since liquidation within five points of current levels seems out of the question after the 42 point tumble from the February high . . . Rather does it seem to us that the issue is under accumulation . . . Accordingly we suggest a place be made for the stock in both investment and trading accounts . . . By switching out of some less favorable situation.

This is the week to keep close track of the rail group. If it is able to generate enough power to overcome the 48 level on the Dow-Jones hourly release, the whole market will benefit to such an extent that we will look for a much broader move than any seen since the late April lows. Industrials and utilities act very well and confirmation of their strong position by the rail group will be a most cheerful sign. For the present we will not enlarge our hypothetical intermediate trading account. But we will make every effort to materially strengthen it by substituting shares which appear to be in the most favorable position.

Notebook: Foreign bonds continue to look better . . . The Associated Press average closed at a new top for many weeks on Saturday . . . Consolidated Gas is acting very well . . . And a splurge to a new high this week is not improbable if general market conditions remain favorable . . . Jewel Tea is being spoken of as a big earner this year . . . One estimate sets per share net at $7 . . . Roughly about 30 per cent ahead of last year . . . U. S. Steel said to be in the market for new machinery . . . For its heavy products plants . . . Aircraft companies may be given a whirl soon on basis of their heavy forward order bookings.

BUILDING Outlook Good

"The building outlook in the United States and in England is good," said Ben Alexander, president of Masonite Corp., arriving here on board the S.S. Bremen from a vacation in Europe.

"Italy," he said, "is buoyed up considerably by her recent victory. France is in a muddle because of her strikes, and England is going along splendidly."

He added:

"The outlook for Masonite Corp. in the second quarter is good and we will make a better showing than we did in the initial 1936 quarter."

TRADING QUIET

While the European scene was cloudy, and Washington developments a bit enigmatic, quiet buying lifted leading shares fractions to 2 or more points.

J. I. Case was a favorite with a gain of 4, and American Woolen preferred, responding to improvement in textile demand, pushed ahead 2. Du Pont was up as much. Lesser advances were registered by Consolidated Edison, North American, United Corp., American Water Works, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, American Can, Western Union, Celanese, Industrial Rayon, American Telephone, Allied Stores, Montgomery Ward, General Motors, Chrysler, Great Northern, N. Y. Central and Pennsylvania.

Reports of serious drought conditions in the spring crop districts brought a sharp rally in wheat. Cotton did better. Carrier bonds pointed higher. Foreign gold currencies were lower in terms of the dollar.

Douglas Aircraft and United Aircraft stocks moved forward when it was learned the War Department this week will announce the award of contracts for 150 pursuit planes.

Some traders were said to have resumed their seats on the sidelines pending the outcome of the congressional tax controversy and the returns from Soldiers' bonus spending which is expected to get under way in a day or so.

There was a feeling in several quarters, however, that shares of companies which are likely to receive the greatest benefit may have partly discounted the distribution.

Current Items

It was noted that the magazine "Steel" found that strong demand for immediate consumption, together with speculative buying against higher prices which take effect July 1, are accounting for the principal mill activities at present.

At the same time that prices of steel scrap, long viewed as a barometer of the industry, are still pointing downward.

While holders of rail stocks were unexcited over the extension of most emergency freight surcharges by the interstate commerce commission, it was believed that a number of the roads would show a substantial increase in revenues over the next several months as a result of the ruling.

The French franc, at the start of foreign exchange transactions, was off .00½ of a cent at 6.58½ cents, and sterling was ⅛ of a cent easier at $5.02⅞.

Comments of Brokers

It does not appear likely that the expected decline in the steel and automobile industries will be sufficient to cause more than a seasonal decline in business as a whole.—R. S. Feigus—Prentice, Blauner & Brady.

We continue to feel that the market is in process of resuming the major advance, which was interrupted by the April decline, and that sound stocks can be purchased to advantage during all periods of irregularity.—Hornblower & Weeks.

Consideration of all the factors suggests continuation of the irregular and selective uptrend.—G. M. P. Murphy & Co.

The minor setback of late Friday was not extended on Saturday but railroad stocks' leadership is needed now if the forward movement in list as a whole is to make any real progress from here.—H. D. Comer-Paine, Webber & Co.

Prominent indices, covering such activities as steel output, automobile sales, retail trade and carloadings, indicate a well-sustained business trend.—J. S. Bache & Co.

There is no indication of any important liquidation, so that while business promise remains unchanged such factors do not alter the long pull bullish picture.—J. P. Maher-Shields & Co.

Washington Notebook

Washington, June 15 (AP)—Brisk retail trade is stressed in business reports to the Commerce Department from leading cities and trade organizations. Trade generally was described as resisting the usual seasonal tendencies toward recession, despite drought damage to crops in some sections. The department noted both city store and rural sales in May advanced against the usual trends for that month.

Japan has strengthened its position as the leading foreign market for American cotton, although a sharp recovery has been staged in exports to the United Kingdom, formerly the leading market abroad. Commerce figures show takings by Japan from August to May totaled 1,397,000 bales, an increase of 22,000 over the preceding season, when Japan took the lead. Exports to the United Kingdom rose 1,266,000 from 660,000 in the first 10 months of the previous cotton season.

The commerce department has been informed that additional diamond mines in South Africa, closed since early in the depression, are preparing to resume operations. The United States is credited with having been one of the chief sources of increased demand for precious stones.

An official trade analysis reveals imports of wine and spirits in the first four months of this year increased 61 per cent compared with the corresponding 1935 period. In value the total rose to $20,700,000 from $12,800,000. Tariff cuts on aged whiskey in the Canadian trade treaty, which became operative January 1, were held chiefly accountable for the increase.

Treasury collections of miscellaneous internal revenue for the current fiscal year, which ends June 30, have topped estimates for the full year by more than $50,000,000. To June 11, collections amounted to $1,930,573,690, an increase of about $337,000,000 over the comparable period of the preceding fiscal year.

TRADE Trend Is UPWARD

HOPEFULNESS REVIVED

By B. C. FORBES

An eventful week.

Political developments were largely responsible for distinct improvement in influential sentiment.

Encouraging economic developments also contributed to lifting security values higher for the week, on broader dealings.

Cleveland almost monopolized attention. The outcome of the Republican convention was generally hailed in responsible circles as eminently satisfactory. Business, industry, finance have made no secret of their opposition to New Deal policies, which they regard as subversive of cherished American institutions, American prosperity, American rights of individuals and states. The united front evolved at Cleveland has dissolved defeatism and inspired fresh hope in anti-New Deal circles over the results in November.

While the Republican platform, as well as Governor Landon's stand on certain important questions is not wholly pleasing to the industrial and financial East, there is no hesitancy whatsoever as to which party they will support. Indeed, the prospect is that a most vigorous campaign will be waged.

* * *

One thing which may be taken for granted:

Should the investing classes, employers and financial institutions, insurance companies and others owning or controlling wealth, become convinced that the New Deal is doomed to certain defeat, America would witness a sensational rise in stock market quotations, in industrial enterprise, in re-employment.

* * *

After nearly seven years of subnormal activity, America is ripe for an overwhelming forward movement. The nation's needs are beyond computation, almost beyond comprehension. Were political clouds removed, we would witness vast spending by industrial companies, by utility corporations, by railroads. We would witness vast volume of construction. We would witness phenomenal demand for machinery, tools, equipment of every kind.

We would witness a rush for stocks.

We would witness extraordinary employment expansion.

* * *

Even in face of distrust of the New Deal, in face of punitive taxation of business enterprises, in face of appalling soaring of governmental deficits and debts, in face of heartbreaking unemployment and relief necessities, trade, industry, securities have been exhibiting improvement.

Power consumption is breaking all records. Automobile sales are the best since 1929. Railway traffic and earnings show substantial gains. Steel output is more than 50 per cent ahead of a year ago, with prices tending upwards.

Home-building is at least moderately on the up-grade, as are real estate values. Oil consumption and the oil industry are moving in the right direction. The amount of checks passing through banks is well above last spring, and bank earnings are cheerier.

Money is being more freely spent on amusements, recreation, travel. Hotels are doing better business. More telephones are being installed.

Retail trade, as well as instalment buying, reflect mounting confidence among consumers, and bonus purchases are counted upon —perhaps too optimistically—to creak a temporary boom. Advertising is brisker.

* * *

Yet, because of political uncertainties, new capital-raising is almost nil, few new enterprises are being launched, relatively few more jobs are being created. Apprehension still retards return to characteristic American daring.

* * *

The probability is that the trend in economics and employment will be governed largely during coming months by the trend in political prospects.

MAY GOLD Imports Higher

Imports of gold during May were $169,957,013, against $28,106,110 in April, and $140,065,202 in May, 1935, the department of commerce reported. May imports of silver were $4,983,533, against $4,490,222 in April and $13,501,161 in May, 1935.

Gold exports were $5123 in May, against $50,861 in April and $49,017 in May, 1935. Silver exports were $203,089, against $534,675 in April and $2,884,871 in May, 1935.

Canada's Index Up

Dominion Bureau of Statistics economic index for week ended June 6 was 104.2 against 103.1 in previous week and 99.8 in the like 1935 week (basis 1926 equals 100).

STEEL OUTPUT

Up on STRONG Demand

New York, June 15 — Strong demand for steel for immediate consumption, combined with an increasing amount of speculative buying against third-quarter price increases, raised steel works operations last week a point to 69 per cent, says "Steel."

While the new prices become generally effective July 1, it is indicated some orders now being taken will require an extension of shipments beyond July 1.

Price increases of $2 a ton in railroad tie-plates and $3 a ton on track spikes and bolts were announced last week, effective August 1. Automobile production in the week declined only about 1400 units to 100,415.

Tinplate producers experienced their fifth consecutive week at 100 per cent operation, with deliveries from some mills deferred six weeks to two months.

Pig iron shipments so far this month have held nearly equal to those in the comparable period in May, with producers confident of continued improvement.

A Fighting Running Mate for Governor Landon

THE nomination of Colonel Frank Knox of Illinois for Vice-President assures Governor Landon a LOYAL AND EFFECTIVE running mate, and completes a TICKET OF GREAT STRENGTH AND APPEAL.

The unanimity with which the head of the ticket was chosen was repeated in the nomination of Colonel Knox—a nomination which is LOGICAL, FITTING, and in all respects ADMIRABLE.

He has had a fine American career and is himself a fine AMERICAN TYPE.

The name Knox has been one of good savor to generations of Americans, who have learned, from their histories, of the close friendship and confidence in which George Washington held his chief of artillery, General Henry Knox, who later became the Secretary of War in Washington's cabinet.

* * *

THE nominee for Vice-President was born in New England. His ancestors fought in our Revolutionary War to gain the liberties which this campaign will be waged to preserve.

He has made a noteworthy record as a capable business man and has won success and distinction in his chosen profession of journalism.

In the struggle with the administration to preserve freedom of speech and press, he has FOUGHT VALIANTLY AND EFFECTIVELY, both with his pen and his voice.

A close personal friend of the late Theodore Roosevelt, he served with the latter in the Cuban war as a member of his famous Rough Rider regiment.

In the late war he enlisted as a private soldier, and by successive promotions for meritorious conduct reached the rank of colonel.

* * *

FROM his youthful days he has always taken a praiseworthy interest in public questions and sought at all times to discharge the duties of enlightened and conscientious citizenship.

He was active in the short-lived Progressive party, and has aligned himself consistently with the progressive forces of the Republican party.

Among the earliest to recognize the un-American character of the New Deal, he SPOKE IN OPEN CRITICISM OF ITS RUINOUS AND SUBVERSIVE POLICIES and became one of its most powerful adversaries.

He was soon recognized as eligible for the presidential nomination and attracted strong support in many states, and from large sections of our population.

* * *

HIS speeches were frank and fearless. His views were those which have found expression in the platform adopted by his party in Cleveland.

In the convention he bore himself disinterestedly, and sought only that his party should truly SERVE THE COUNTRY and arrive at wise and patriotic decisions.

Although the choice of the Illinois delegates for President, he joined with others, named by their respective states as favorite sons, in refusing to contest the prevailing preference of the convention for Governor Landon, and, in withdrawing his name and releasing his delegates, made in common with Senators Vandenberg and Dickinson, Governor Nice of Maryland, and Mr. Taft of Ohio, a patriotic contribution to harmonious action and a united party front.

* * *

NO one who knows Colonel Knox, or is familiar with his record or his utterances, can doubt his DEVOTION TO AMERICAN PRINCIPLES and his fervent desire to restore conscience and reason to the ordering of our affairs.

He has the support of Illinois, a pivotal state, and will materially strengthen the ticket.

HIS NOMINATION MEETS WITH BROAD AND EARNEST APPROVAL.

Running True to Form

IN HIS SPEECH delivered at Little Rock, Ark., President Roosevelt hinted that, if he is reelected, the Constitution would have LESS RESPECT in his eyes that it had when he asked Congress to pass the Guffey Coal-Control Law whether they considered it constitutional or not.

This amazing defiance of the Constitution from an oath-bound President of the United States was only thinly concealed in the passage of his speech wherein he boasted that Jefferson expressed some doubts as to the constitutionality of the Louisiana Purchase adding triumphantly:

"NOBODY CARRIED THE CASE TO THE SUPREME COURT."

Nobody carried the case to the Supreme Court because there was nothing in the Constitution that PROHIBITED the President from acquiring additional territory.

There is also in Mr. Roosevelt's brag that "nobody carried the case to the Supreme Court" an implied condemnation of ANY ONE who carries to the Supreme Court ANY ISSUE that emanates from his White House MUST-MILL.

As a plain matter of fact, the whole Little Rock speech was a DIRECT THRUST at the Constitution, the Supreme Court and State rights.

The tribute the President paid to the Constitution was politely NEGATIVE. His thrusts at it were POSITIVE.

THE PRESIDENT today stands where he has stood for three years—A THREAT AGAINST CONSTITUTIONAL BULWARKS.

In those "Early Days" LIBERTY, CONSTITUTIONAL GUARANTEES and OATH OF OFFICE were spelled precisely as they are today.

Life today in America would be just as simple as it was in the days of the founding fathers if it were not for the complicated machinery of New Deal regimentation and the verbal and actual chicanery of DOUBLE-DEALERS.

The Tax Army

THERE in an army billeted in every house in the land.

IT is TAXES.

THERE in an army billeted in every factory in the land.

IT is TAXES.

THERE is an army billeted on every farmer in the country.

IT IS TAXES.

THERE is an army that stands over your baby's cradle.

IT is TAXES.

THERE is an army that stands ready to collect from millions yet unborn.

IT is TAXES.

THIS army that cows us and eats out our substance has grown under the Roosevelt Administration to colossal proportions.

THIRTY-SIX THOUSAND MILLION DOLLARS!

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Sensitive? Always being hurt? Life just one blue spell after another? Probably. Sensitiveness is one of our commonest and cussedest forms of conceit.

Elsie Robinson

Does that give you a start? Maybe you've been thinking that you have a monopoly on sensitiveness—that no one else suffers quite as much as you do. That your idea about yourself?

THEY GET OVER IT. YOU'RE JUST ONE OUT OF MILLIONS, PARTNER. THERE'S NOTHING UNIQUE ABOUT YOUR TROUBLE AND THERE'S NOTHING OBSCURE ABOUT ITS CAUSE OR CURE.

Sensitiveness is not a sign of a great or a rare mind. It is the sign of a very tight, immature mind—a baby mind, a mind that never opened to the significance of the life about it.

THE DIAGNOSIS

Why are you sensitive? You're sensitive because mentally you're all out of focus. You center everything on yourself. You do not see other lives, other problems. You think you do. You discuss other people. You may even fuss a great deal over people. But always you are thinking of yourself—and of how various acts affect yourself.

What's the cure for sensitiveness? Open your mind. Look beyond yourself. Grow some prospective. Learn to be impersonal—as impersonal about people as you are about climate.

The climate is a lively and often a very disagreeable factor in your life. It can cause you quite as much discomfort as the most malicious person. But you keep that discomfort on the surface—you don't let it get inside. You don't "take it to heart."

But snubs and spite and loneliness and loss and disappointment also happen to everyone—they, too, are part of all life. They are as universal as climate. They are the result of the every-varying climate of human nature.

THE TREATMENT

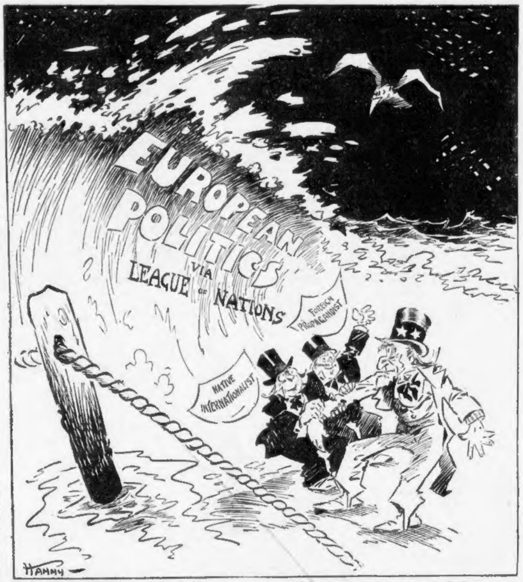
God isn't picking on you—people aren't conspiring against you — people are just HAPPENING as climate is happening and you're in the midst of it all. And your feelings are getting frightfully hurt because you take your actions personally.

Stop thinking of your feelings for a while and think of the other fellow's. He may seem to aim at you, but he really isn't—any more than the fog is aimed at you. He's just functioning, and that's his business. DON'T MAKE IT YOURS.

Get a new slant—learn that this isn't a one man show—move with the parade and realize that whatever is happening to you is happening to the rest of the marchers—there's the cure for sensitiveness.

That is if you really want to be cured. Some don't.

Doing Their Best to Get Us In



Again they seek in accents sleek
To play their old-time tricks,
The deep intrigues of pacts and leagues
In foreign politics.
They need a rich and sturdy goat
To keep their alien plots afloat.

They crave to jam your Uncle Sam
Into the undertow.
They pull and shove regardless of
The ancient debts they owe;
But he prefers his native shore
For he has been a goat before.

Gold Rules the World

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Out in Old Kentucky, Uncle Sam is building the strongest treasure house the world ever will have known — solid masonry above ground, deep caverns, electrically guarded. One touch of a foot, the lightest groping of a thieving hand, will bring a clamor of alarm, machine guns, tear gas, hand grenades — all the defensive paraphernalia of a fortress.

Edwin C. Hill

For that is what it will be, a fortress to guard the greatest hoard of yellow gold ever gathered by the hand of man. The bulk of nine billion dollars in bullion and coin. Almost three-fourths of all the gold in the world. The treasure that secures our paper money; the rock foundation of our national credit. Only France possesses a treasure stronghold to compare with the new vault of the United States Treasury.

By the Seine, in Paris, deep down, seven stories underground, France guards and hoards her three billion against the hazards of revolution and the ever present menace of war. Gold remains today, as it has been for centuries, the one and only virtually changeless standard of values.

A CHANGELESS STANDARD

When the money of a country is based on gold, the people of that country have faith in their paper money. When the gold basis is kicked from under paper money, the people of any country lose confidence in the paper.

All the subtle theories and arguments in the world cannot alter that fundamental fact. Mankind has been in the grip of the god of gold through the rolling ages, and today he bends the suppliant knees even more lowly than ever he bent in the days of the Pharaohs, of the Persian Kings or of Solomon the Great.

From the days of Imperial Rome to the time of Columbus the craze for gold forced nations to war and pillage. Cortez and Pizarro robbed in the New World as Alexander and Scipio had robbed in the Old. Throughout the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, Spanish treasure ships, great galleons, flying the red and gold flag of Spain, sailed home from Peru and Panama loaded down with gold in bars, gold in ornaments, gold in dust and nuggets.

THE MODERN ERA

Those days passed and then came the modern era of gold, with the great gold rushes to California, to Australia to Alaska, to South Africa and right now, to the gold fields of Ontario. The rush of the Forty-niners to the rich placers and the Mother Lode of the Golden State started the western migration which led to the building of the transcontinental railroads, the advance of the Iron Horse across plains and mountains which linked the West to the young United States.

Since 1492, the year Columbus discovered America, the total amount of gold produced in the whole world has been 22 billions and a half. But today, in gold money and gold bullion, there are only 12 billions of this vast amount accounted for. Where is the rest, the vanished ten billions? Much of it has gone into industry. Millions of it have gone into gold jewelry.

In the Temple of Solomon, gold was used with prodigious profusion. The lamps, tongs and hinges were pure gold. Its very walls were overlaid with gold. Solomon's throne was of solid gold. And when the Queen of Sheba went to visit him, she took with her tons of gold, carried on the backs of elephants.

Somewhere in South Africa, most probably in Rhodesia, are the very mines of incalculable richness from which King Solomon derived his inexhaustible gold supply. Elephant hunters in Rhodesia have brought back to civilization extraordinary tales told by natives in the deep interior. The tale is of a great mine, now swallowed by the jungle, which was worked by the slaves of Solomon more than three thousand years ago.

BURIED BILLIONS

Seligman, a German explorer, came out of the jungle years ago with a story of a witch doctor who had made his way through a cave in a mountain side, to a great chamber. From the flagstones of the vast room stone steps arose. The witch doctor climbed the steps and entered another great room which was stacked high with stone chests. And every chest was filled with gold bars and nuggets of raw yellow gold!

Gold is restless and everlastingly seeks a change. It changes its form and place, and yet endures. For even the gold setting of a woman's bracelet or the gold in a man's watch may once have glittered from the walls of Solomon's Temple, or shone on the shaven heads of the priests of Isis in old Egypt, or have been snatched from some burning city of the Spanish Main to the tragic accompaniment of the shrieks of dying men and the screams of captured women.

New York Day by Day ∴ ∴ By O. O. McIntyre

New York, June 15—Diary: To the tram with my lady to greet my boyhood friend, Jay Price, from Los Angeles, who is to visit awhile. And home to find a message from Rupert Hughes in a dicky over his sick dog and in hunt for a veterinarian. So sent him to Dr. Blamey.

O. O. McIntyre

Dexter Fellows in a moment with, as always, a gay tale. And Herb Roth popped by, too. And so at my mail, there being an amusing post card about Australia from Polly Moran who has been trouping there. Then to look at some porch furniture and to a hoop-do-do for Walter Wanger.

Dinner at the Bruce Bartons. Then to my study and sat up with Price until 4 o'clock. And he told of stopping off at our birthplace in Missouri en route east and visiting an old Negro character Roe at the poor farm. And that he asked about me, which somehow touched me.

Ted Woodyard, in his 30's, is now publishing more newspapers than any one publisher in America. His chain is composed entirely of weeklies. He began right after graduation from college with a weekly in his home town, Spencer, W. Va., and later took over or started ten more in his native state.

Recently he began operating on Long Island and has acquired control of 16 weeklies there and still later bought four in Delaware—a total of 31. He hires a local editor in each town, gives him full rein and lets him make or break the sheet. So far not one of them has been a failure.

The other day Woodyard stopped at the leading and only hotel in one of his towns. The beds were pretty hard, but not any harder than the dining room waitress and chambermaid combined. She was sitting in the office imbibing an old fashioned when Woodyard came in to inquire of the clerk if he had room. The lady piped up: "Sure, we can give you half a dozen, if you want 'em. Business is lousey."

In a roadside pull-up along a reach of New Jersey yesterday the vista included a seldom seen city sight—a wood chopper. The technique of wood chopping has changed but little since Ohio days. The chopper still spends most of his time knocking the handle into place. He selected each slat with infinite care, studying between licks at great length, and gathering strength, one supposes, for the next whang. At about the fourth smite he was stuck, driving the blade in so deep he could not get it out.

He seemed utterly floored. Evidently he had put everything he had into that blow. But, thank Providence, he had enough energy left to lean on the handle. It was somehow discouraging to see a fellow put every molecule of vim into a haymaker such as that and see it go sour.

Ellen Mackay Berlin, the Social Register wife of the song writer, Irving Berlin, has taken up her literary endeavors again after a long lapse, and recently landed a short story in a national magazine.

It was Mrs. Berlin's first writing effort, incidentally, that was credited with providing the needed afflatus for The New Yorker, which was holding to the ropes and groggy. Her article provided the necessary breathing spell for it to get on its feet and stay there.

Many dying magazines have been swung back into vigorous circulation by a story or series of articles. A notable example was Everybody's years ago with Thomas W. Lawson's "Frenzied Finance." Hampton's was resuscitated by a series of polar articles by Dr. Cook.

Bagatelles: Marilyn Miller's estate totaled a quarter million . . . Percy Hammond's was more than $89,000 . . . Barbara Stanwyck likes to sweep, dust and put up preserves . . .
